

FIVE AIR RECORDS BROKEN BY BERT HINKLER

FLIES FROM LONDON TO AUSTRALIA IN FIFTEEN DAYS

TINY MACHINE AND ITS SINGLE OCCUPANT BREAK KEITH-SMITH RECORD

LONGEST SOLO FLIGHT, LONGEST IN LIGHT AIRPLANE, FASTEST TO INDIA

Port Darwin, Australia, Feb. 22.—(UP).—Another air record fell today when Captain Bert Hinkler, Australian flyer, set his small Avro airplane down here, thus completing a flight from London to Australia in 15 days.

The tiny machine and its single occupant had broken the record made by Sir Keith and Sir Ross Smith in 1919 when they flew to Australia from London in 28 days.

The flight also established another record. It was the longest single flight ever made by one pilot. Hinkler already held this record as when he landed at Singapore Monday he had completed about a 7,000 mile flight.

Today's landing brought the total of his flight to slightly more than 11,000 miles and this probably will be enlarged as Hinkler intended to continue on to his home in Queensland.

The flight today was from Bima, Sumbawa, approximately 1,000 miles.

The aviation world was somewhat amazed when Hinkler started his flight from the Croydon aerodrome, London, 15 days ago in the little Avro plane. The motor is 35 horse power which is capable of developing 80 horse power when it gets in the air.

His flight has been one of long hops over hazardous courses. The first leg was from London to Rome.

Throughout the flight Hinkler reported very little difficulty.

While the principal record to fall was the London-Australia flight time, it was pointed out that Hinkler had established four other records in his dash from London.

They include:

The longest solo flight.

The longest flight in a light airplane.

The fastest flight between Great Britain and India.

The first non-stop flight between London and Rome.

In the last flight from Bima, the tiny Avro was forced to go about 500 miles over water.

SENATOR REED RENEWS ATTACK ON HARDING, COOLIDGE

SCORES ADMINISTRATIONS OF THE TWO PRESIDENTS

DECLARES REPUBLICAN PROTECTIVE TARIFF PILES UP FARMERS' ILLS

Tulsa, Okla., Feb. 22.—(UP).—Senator James A. Reed of Missouri renewed his attack upon the Harding and Coolidge republican administrations in an address here last night, declaring the republican protective tariff was responsible for the farmers' misfortunes.

The address was Reed's second speech of his southwest campaign for the democratic presidential nomination.

Reed attributed the present farm situation to maladjustment in prices which resulted from the republican protective tariff.

"If the farmer could buy on the same price level, upon which he must sell, he would have an even chance in the race of life," the Missouri senator said. "But the manufacturers, chiefly from the east, were determined to deny him that right."

Senator Reed reiterated his charge of "corruption in government" which he aimed at manufacturers "who put up vast sums of money to elect the republican ticket."

"We have the evidence of direct bribery of cabinet officers and other high officials, orgy of corruption for which the present republican management and the administration itself cannot escape responsibility."

Reed left Tulsa late last night and was expected to arrive in Kansas City today from where he will proceed to Topeka to address the annual Washington birthday dinner of Kansas democrats. Thursday he is to speak in Denver.

There were merciless hand to hand encounters. The Wahabis captured all of the Jowarin cattle.

The Wahabis finally brought down one of the planes and the pilot, R. B. H. Jackson, was killed.

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 22.—(UP).—Declaring she was tired of her husband continually calling to heaven to save her soul, Mrs. Hulda T. Larson, 39, filed a petition for divorce in Ramsey county court.

Larson, she charged, continually knelt asking God's help to save her whom she claims is a sinner because she wanted some sort of amusement.

Every time the door opens on Sundays he goes to church, Mrs. Larson declared of her husband. She avers that she has become somewhat skeptical about her husband's religious ardor, however, as she says she does not believe the church is open until the "wee small hours when the defendant returns home."

They were married in 1915. There are no children.

STUDENTS ARE BLAMED FOR DEMONSTRATION

ANTI-AMERICAN EXHIBITION IS STAGED IN MEXICO CITY LAST NIGHT

CROWD ON AVENIDA JUAREZ IS ESTIMATED AT 1,000 PERSONS

Mexico City, Feb. 22.—(UP).—Students today were blamed for the anti-American demonstration staged along the Avenida Juarez last night by a crowd estimated at more than 1,000 persons.

Fireworks were exploded, insults were cast at Americans and there were mingled vivas for General Augustino Sandino, the Nicaraguan rebel leader.

It was a harmless demonstration although some of the celebrators invading hotels and dining rooms, where Americans were, and denounced the visitors.

There were many women in the group, and although they were poorly dressed they were said to be students.

The demonstration started on the Avenida Juarez, one of the principal streets in the city, and afterwards small groups entered hotels, dining rooms and theater lobbies. They frequently shot off fireworks as they carried on their demonstration.

"Viva Sandino" was frequently shouted while occasionally the shout of "kill the Gringos" could be heard.

At the Hotel Regis, where there were a number of tourists, many Americans retreated to the lobby as the crowd approached. Others stood in front of the hotel and listened to the taunts and jeers of the crowd.

At Sanborn's restaurant, one of the city, a number of Americans were having a late meal when a small group of demonstrators entered. They shouted their denunciations of the Americans and exploded fireworks in the restaurant.

Two policemen put out the group, estimated at about 75, without difficulty.

Thereafter guards were posted at the door of the restaurant.

The police would permit no disorder in any of the hotels and restaurants but diverted traffic from the Avenida Juarez to give the students a free play in their demonstration.

FARMERS ENJOY UPWARD TREND OF PROSPERITY

Minneapolis, Feb. 22.—(UP).—For the first time in eight years farmers in the northwest are filling in a trend of prosperity, it was indicated today in income tax reports received by L. M. Wilentz, collector of internal revenue for Minnesota.

Information from his office is that an amazing number of farmers in the northwest are filling in income tax returns for 1927, a condition which has not existed since the conclusion of the war.

The number of such returns, it was stated, is far in excess of those received by this date in other recent years, and many of the returns plainly indicate that agriculturalists made a substantial profit during the past year.

It also was revealed that many new corporations and partnerships formed are reporting profits for their first year of operation. Corporations and partnerships which never before made enough profit to file an income tax, are filing this year in large numbers, it was declared.

S-4 COMMANDER IS BLAMED FOR FATAL CRASH

THE NAVAL COURT OF INQUIRY MAKES PUBLIC ITS FINDINGS

"SERIOUS BLAME" ALSO IS ATTACHED TO COMMANDER OF PAULDING

Washington Feb. 22.—(UP).—A naval court of inquiry at last has placed blame for the loss of 40 men in the submarine S-4, which was sunk off Provincetown, Mass., by the coast guard destroyer Paulding on Dec. 17.

Major responsibility for the crash was placed on the late Lieut. Commander R. K. Jones of the S-4, although Lieut. Commander John S. Baylis of the Paulding likewise incurred "serious blame."

The court held that Rear Admiral Brumby should be relieved from command of the control force of which the S-4 was part, because he lacked knowledge of submarine construction to conduct the rescue intelligently.

Controversy already has started over the court's report.

Secretary Wilbur ordered the court reconvened to consider further its findings.

The navy's high command, Admiral C. F. Hughes, chief of operations, and Rear Admiral R. H. Leigh, chief of navigation, held that the court had acted unfairly in condemning Brumby without giving him a chance to testify in his own defense. It was suggested that a court martial would enable Brumby to be heard.

Despite its criticism of Brumby the court said the rescue plans "conceived by an expert staff were logical, intelligent and were diligently executed with good judgment and the greatest possible expedition."

"Yet Brumby failed to contribute," the court asserted, "that superior and intelligent guidance, force and sound judgment expected from an officer of his length of service, experience and position."

Stating its opinions on the facts, the court held that "everything was done to save the lives of those on board the S-4 that could have been done under existing weather conditions."

Major blame for the disaster was placed on the S-4 in a letter signed by Rear Admiral Leigh, on the ground that the lookout on the submarine could have more easily sighted the destroyer than the destroyer's lookout could have seen the periscopes of the submerged S-4. Leigh refused, however, to concur in the finding of personal responsibility on the part of Lieut. Commander Jones, in the absence of definite proof that he was in command at the time of the collision.

In an accompanying letter, Secretary of Treasury Mellon, whose department includes the coast guard, absolved Lieut. Commander Baylis of any blame.

"The officers of the submarine," Mellon held, "had opportunity to see the destroyer at a considerable distance and seek immediate safety at a greater depth, while the destroyer cannot be held negligible for failing to observe the periscopes moving slowly through the water."

HARRY F. SINCLAIR CONTEMPLATING JAIL SENTENCES

SENTENCES AGGREGATE NINE MONTHS IMPOSED UPON HIM IN 2 CASES

CLIMAX TO 11 WEEK CONTEMPT OF COURT CAME LAST YESTERDAY

By HERBERT LITTLE (United Press Staff Correspondent)

Washington, Feb. 22.—(UP).—The government marked down its fourth victory in six oil trials today, and Harry F. Sinclair, multi-millionaire center of the Teapot Dome scandal, contemplated jail sentences aggregating nine months imposed upon him in two of the cases.

Justice Frederick L. Siddons in District of Columbia supreme court imposed a six-month sentence on Sinclair late yesterday as the climax of the 11-week contempt of court case resulting from Sinclair's employment of Burns detectives to shadow Fall-Sinclair jurors.

Henry Mason Day, Sinclair agent in the jury espionage, was sentenced to four months; William J. Burns, famous detective juror, got 15 days, and his son, W. Sherman Burns, executive of the agency which provided the jury shadowers, was left off with $1,000 fine.

All four were free on bonds today, having noted appeals and put up bond after Justice Siddons scathingly denounced their jury-spying and imposed sentences, varied according to various degrees of guilt.

Argument of their appeals in the district court of appeals will not come before next fall. Meanwhile another appeal by Sinclair alone, from a three-month sentence for contempt of the senate in connection with the first senate Teapot Dome investigation in 1924, is scheduled to be argued in that appeals court in April.

The latest case will be carried to the U. S. supreme court if necessary in an attempt to obtain a final ruling that jury-shadowing is legal, defense lawyers said.

While the urbane Sinclair returns to New York to his world-wide oil business, three developments affecting others in the numerous oil leases are expected soon. Justice Jennings Bailey is to rule probably tomorrow on the habeas corpus fight for freedom of Col. Robert W. Stewart, Standard Oil Company of Indiana executive, deciding whether the senate had a right to arrest him; the grand jury is expected to return an indictment charging him with contempt of the senate for refusing to testify fully before the renewed Teapot Dome inquiry in a week or two; and the contempt of court case against Harry M. Blackmer, missing Teapot Dome witness, is scheduled to open before Siddons next Monday.

In April Sinclair and former Secretary of Interior Albert B. Fall are scheduled to be tried again on charges of conspiring to defraud the government of the Teapot Dome naval oil reserve. Fall leased that valuable Wyoming oil field to Sinclair in a transaction since denounced as corrupt and annulled by the U. S. supreme court. The trial, starting April 2, is a renewal of the disastrous Fall-Sinclair trial which ceased in a mistrial last Nov. 2, after the jury-shadowing was disclosed.

The government has won in the Sinclair senate contempt case, and in the two civil suits brought to annul the Teapot Teapot Dome and Elk Hills leases made by Fall, in addition to the jury-shadowing case. Fall and E. L. Doheny, Elk Hills lessee, were acquitted in one criminal case, and the Fall-Sinclair mistrial lost in the latter, however.

FARMERS ENJOY UPWARD TREND OF PROSPERITY

Minneapolis, Feb. 22.—(UP)—For the first time in eight years farmers in the northwest are filing in-ward trend of prosperity. It was indicated today in income tax reports received by L. M. Wilcutts, collector of internal revenue for Minnesota.

Information from his office is that an amazing number of farmers in the northwest are filing income tax returns for 1927, a condition which has not existed since the conclusion of the war.

The number of such returns, it was stated, is far in excess of those received by this date in other recent years, and many of the returns plainly indicate that agriculturalists made a substantial profit during the past year.

It also was revealed that many new corporations and partnerships formed are reporting profits for their first year of operation. Corporations and partnerships which never before made enough profit to file an income tax, are filing this year in large numbers, it was declared.

COMMERCIAL RADIO SERVICE BETWEEN U.S. AND SHANGHAI

Manila, P. I., Feb. 22.—(UP)—Commercial radio service between America and Shanghai was inaugurated today, C. H. Nance, far eastern representative of the Radio Corporation of America, announced.

The entry of radio transmission of messages in China will tend to break the monopoly held by telegraph companies. The Chinese government and British and Danish telegraph companies entered an agreement in 1924 which gave them the exclusive right to transmit telegraph messages.

S-4 COMMANDER IS BLAMED FOR FATAL CRASH

THE NAVAL COURT OF INQUIRY MAKES PUBLIC ITS FINDINGS

"SERIOUS BLAME" ALSO IS ATTACHED TO COMMANDER OF PAULDING

Washington Feb. 22.—(UP)—A naval court of inquiry at last has placed blame for the loss of 40 men in the submarine S-4, which was sunk off Provincetown, Mass., by the coast guard destroyer Paulding on Dec. 17.

Major responsibility for the crash was placed on the late Lieut. Commander R. K. Jones of the S-4, although Lieut. Commander John S. Baylis of the Paulding likewise incurred "serious blame."

The court held that Rear Admiral Brumby should be relieved from command of the control force of which the S-4 was part, because he lacked knowledge of submarine construction to conduct the rescue intelligently.

Controversy already has started over the court's report.

Secretary Wilbur ordered the court reconvened to consider further its findings.

The navy's high command, Admiral C. F. Hughes, chief of operations, and Rear Admiral R. H. Leigh, chief of navigation, held that the court had acted unfairly in condemning Brumby without giving him a chance to testify in his own defense. It was suggested that a court martial would enable Brumby to be heard.

Despite its criticism of Brumby the court said the rescue plans "conceived by an expert staff were logical, intelligent and were diligently executed with good judgment and the greatest possible expedition."

"Yet Brumby failed to contribute," the court asserted, "that superior and intelligent guidance, force and sound judgment expected from an officer of his length of service, experience and position."

Stating its opinions on the facts, the court held that "everything was done to save the lives of those on board the S-4 that could have been done under existing weather conditions."

Major blame for the disaster was placed on the S-4 in a letter signed by Rear Admiral Leigh, on the ground that the lookout on the submarine could have more easily sighted the destroyer than the destroyer's lookout could have seen the periscopes of the submerged S-4. Leigh refused, however, to concur in the finding of personal responsibility on the part of Lieut. Commander Jones, in the absence of definite proof that he was in command at the time of the collision.

In an accompanying letter, Secretary of Treasury Mellon, whose department includes the coast guard, absolved Lieut. Commander Baylis of any blame.

"The officers of the submarine," Mellon held, "had opportunity to see the destroyer at a considerable distance and seek immediate safety at a greater depth, while the destroyer cannot be held negligent for failing to observe the periscopes moving slowly through the water."

HARRY F. SINCLAIR CONTEMPLATING JAIL SENTENCES

SENTENCES AGGREGATE NINE MONTHS IMPOSED UPON HIM IN 2 CASES

CLIMAX TO 11 WEEK CONTEMPT OF COURT CAME LATE YESTERDAY

By HERBERT LITTLE (United Press Staff Correspondent)

Washington, Feb. 22.—(UP)—The government marked down its fourth victory in six oil trials today, and Harry F. Sinclair, multi-millionaire center of the Teapot Dome scandal, contemplated jail sentences aggregating nine months imposed upon him in two of the cases.

Justice Frederick L. Siddons in District of Columbia supreme court imposed a six-month sentence on Sinclair late yesterday as the climax of the 11-week contempt of court case resulting from Sinclair's employment of Burns detectives to shadow Fall-Sinclair jurors.

Henry Mason Day, Sinclair agent in the jury espionage, was sentenced to four months; William J. Burns, famous detective juror, got 15 days, and his son, W. Sherman Burns, executive of the agency which provided the jury shadowers, was left off with $1,000 fine.

All four were free on bonds today, having noted appeals and put up bond after Justice Siddons scathingly denounced their jury-spying and imposed sentences, varied according to various degrees of guilt.

Argument of their appeals in the district court of appeals will not come before next fall. Meanwhile another appeal by Sinclair alone, from a three-month sentence for contempt of the senate in connection with the first senate Teapot Dome investigation in 1924, is scheduled to be argued in that appeals court in April.

The latest case will be carried to the U. S. supreme court if necessary in an attempt to obtain a final ruling that jury-shadowing is legal, defense lawyers said.

While the urbane Sinclair returns to New York to his world wide oil business, three developments affecting others in the numerous oil leases are expected soon. Justice Jennings Bailey is to rule probably tomorrow on the habeas corpus fight for freedom of Col. Robert W. Stewart, Standard Oil Company of Indiana executive, deciding whether the senate had a right to arrest him; the grand jury is expected to return an indictment charging him with contempt of the senate for refusing to testify fully before the renewed Teapot Dome inquiry in a week or two; and the contempt of court case against Harry M. Blackmer, missing Teapot Dome witness, is scheduled to open before Siddons next Monday.

In April Sinclair and former Secretary of Interior Albert B. Fall are scheduled to be tried again on charges of conspiring to defraud the government of the Teapot Dome naval oil reserve. Fall leased that valuable Wyoming oil field to Sinclair in a transaction since denounced as corrupt and annulled by the U. S. supreme court. The trial, starting April 2, is a renewal of the disastrous Fall-Sinclair trial which ceased in a mistrial last Nov. 2, after the jury-shadowing was disclosed.

The government has won in the Sinclair senate contempt case, and in the two civil suits brought to annul the Teapot Dome and Elk Hills leases made by Fall, in addition to the jury-shadowing case. Fall and E. L. Doheny, Elk Hills lessee, were acquitted in one criminal case, and the Fall-Sinclair mistrial lost in the latter, however.

Vernon Center, Minn., Feb. 22.—(UP)—Held in trust for 21 years, $1,02, increased to $2,30 through compound interest, has been turned over to Edwin C. Krause. The money was placed in trust in a Mankato bank by Krause's grandfather, until he should have attained his majority.

First Made in England

Lineum, which is a process of manufacturing a floor covering from oxidized linseed oil and powdered cork, was introduced into England in 1860 by a man named Walton. We do not find that it was on the market in the United States during the Civil war.—Washington Star.

Glasgow in History

Glasgow traces its beginnings in tradition to the little wooden church which Kentigern, apostle to the Scots, built on the banks of Molendinar about 560 A. D. Nothing is known of the town for more than 500 years until David, prince of Cumbria, the future King David I, in 1116, re-established the see of Glasgow and rebuilt its church.

PLATTE LAKE

A quite extensive program was rendered at the Gorton school on the eve of St. Valentine's day. We understand it was well attended and enjoyed by all present.

Last week four families of the neighborhood were busily engaged in storing away a product which Jack Frost had produced at Round Lake. Twelve loads of same were stored away in the various houses for the purpose. The ice was 22 inches thick.

It was a great surprise to many of us to hear of Cupid's rapid advance toward matrimony in the courtship of the following: Emil Wunderlich-Mrs. Pointen; Frank Segler-Mrs. Austin Schilling; Oscar Boeder-Miss Eleanor Giles. We never thought that leap year could exert such influence. This has been a lucky or unlucky year (which?) for many of our young men past the thirty mark so far. The past facts bring the two-fold message to whom it may concern: Cheer up, there still is hope, or Beware! as the case may be. After all it is true: "It is not good for man to be alone."

Mrs. C. Bower, whose health had failed for some time, was taken to the hospital in Brainerd for special treatments. We are glad to hear that her condition again is such that she can be home again. We hope she will be all well again in a short time.

Marianne Heidtke was on the sick list for a whole week with la grippe. We are glad to see her well again.

Miss Carry Brost has been visiting with her sister, Mrs. C. Boeder, for a few weeks, and together with the Boeder family attended the services at the Platte Lake church Sunday.

"The early bird catches the worm," but it is not wise to do certain things too early, wait at least till things opens. Disregarding laws has made things unpleasant for many a one, in civil as well as religious life.

Beginning next Sunday special Lenten services will be conducted at the Platte Lake church.

Exaggeration

The desire to entertain and make an impression is the cause of much exaggeration. But this habit is found mostly in those who have a keen imagination.

Large oversized loops and uprights high can be found in the writing of one who is inclined to stretch the truth. Open a's and o's, particularly when the t bar is weak, are signs of a talker who never knows when to stop and naturally enlarges on all details.

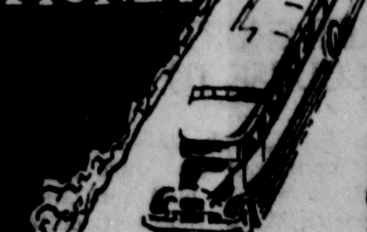

Large writing with much space between words and letters also spells exaggeration especially when i dots and t bars are missing. Lower loops of f winding about the main stroke and small g's with the upper loop made wide open on the order of a hook are additional signs of this trait in the writer.

A lack of order in the general appearance of the page and variation of size in the letters as well as variation of slants to the writing is another way of telling the fellow who will say things with little regard for accuracy.

Perhaps the best key of all for the detection of the habit of being over-dramatic and emphatic, is the last part of the letter m. If this is higher than the first and second parts, then the writer is sure to paint the picture very alluringly.

Note—Do not make final judgment until other signs in writing are studied. (Copyright.)

First Made in England

Lincolum, which is a process of manufacturing a floor covering from oxidized linseed oil and powdered cork, was introduced into England in 1860 by a man named Walton. We do not find that it was on the market in the United States during the Civil war.—Washington Star.

Glasgow in History

Glasgow traces its beginnings in tradition to the little wooden church which Kentigern, apostle to the Scots, built on the banks of Molendinar about 560 A. D. Nothing is known of the town for more than 500 years until David, prince of Cumbria, the future King David I, in 1116, re-established the see of Glasgow and rebuilt its church.

PLATTE LAKE

A quite extensive program was rendered at the Gorton school on the eve of St. Valentine's day. We understand it was well attended and enjoyed by all present.

Last week four families of the neighborhood were busily engaged in storing away a product which Jack Frost had produced at Round Lake. Twelve loads of same were stored away in the various houses for the purpose. The ice was 22 inches thick.

It was a great surprise to many of us to hear of Cupid's rapid advance toward matrimony in the courtship of the following: Emil Wunderlich-Mrs. Pointen; Frank Segler-Mrs. Austin nee Schilling; Oscar Boeder-Miss Eleanor Gilles. We never thought that leap year could exert such influence. This has been a lucky or unlucky year (which?) for many of our young men past the thirty mark so far. The past facts bring the two-fold message to whom it may concern: Cheer up, there still is hope, or Beware! as the case may be. After all it is true: "It is not good for man to be alone."

Mrs. C. Bower, whose health had failed for some time, was taken to the hospital in Brainerd for special treatment. We are glad to hear that her condition again is such that she can be home again. We hope she will be all well again in a short time.

Marianne Heidtke was on the sick list for a whole week with a gripe. We are glad to see her well again.

Miss Carry Brost has been visiting with her sister, Mrs. C. Boeder, for a few weeks, and together with the Boeder family attended the services at the Platte Lake church Sunday.

"The early bird catches the worm," but it is not wise to do certain things too early, wait at least till season opens. Disregarding laws has made things unpleasant for many a one, in civil as well as religious life.

Beginning next Sunday special Lenten services will be conducted at the Platte Lake church.

Exaggeration

The desire to entertain and make an impression is the cause of much exaggeration. But this habit is found mostly in those who have a keen imagination.

Large oversized loops and uprights high can be found in the writing of one who is inclined to stretch the truth. Open a's and o's, particularly when the t bar is weak, are signs of a talker who never knows when to stop and naturally enlarges on all details.

Large writing with much space between words and letters also spells exaggeration especially when i dots and t bars are missing. Lower loops of f winding about the main stroke and small g's with the upper loop made wide open on the order of a hook are additional signs of this trait in the writer.

A lack of order in the general appearance of the page and variation of size in the letters as well as variation of slants to the writing is another way of telling the fellow who will say things with little regard for accuracy. Perhaps the best key of all for the detection of the habit of being over-dramatic and emphatic, is the last part of the letter m. If this is higher than the first and second parts, then the writer is sure to paint the picture very alluringly.

Note.—Do not make final judgment until other signs in writing are studied. (Copyright.)

Launch and Motor Service for Gull and Whitefish Lakes
Announced Today

AFFECTS 3,000 PATRONS

Speeds up Collection and Distribution for Four Months
Starting March 15

Establishment of a speedy delivery and mail collection service for lake resort patrons, summer visitors, and residents on the Gull Lake chain and Whitefish Lake will be inaugurated by the United States Postal Department this summer, according to an announcement made by M. H.
Bunn, Washington, D. C., superintendent of motor mail routes in his visit to Brainerd today.

Mr. Bunn announced that he would call for competitive bids in the handling of routes on Gull and Whitefish Lakes, within a few days.

The new service will take care of 1400 mail patrons on Gull Lake and 1600 on Whitefish Lake. It will be in force from May 15 to September 15.

The service will include the use of launches in the collection and distribution of mail on the lakes with motor service to the postoffice at Brainerd.

At the present time there is only one such service active in Minnesota, that being at Cass Lake.

The establishment of such mail routes means a great deal to the county and the resort sections and will prove a boon to the tourist business.

KU KLUX KLAN NO LONGER A MASKED ORDER

Dallas, Texas, Feb. 22.—(UP)—The Ku Klux Klan will no longer be a masked order after today, Dr. Hiram W. Evans, imperial wizard of the organization, said in a statement to the United Press today. After all chapters of the hooded order have held meetings throughout the country tonight, the organization will adopt the name Knights of the Great Forest, Dr.
Evans said.

"The Klan has completed the first phase of its work," he said. "The feeling has been growing in the ranks of the organization that it was time to unmask. The date chosen for un-masking has great patriotic significance."

"The Klan is entering upon the second phase of its work. This calls for efforts to promote the assimilation of aliens in America, obtain support of our constitution and laws and inculcate throughout America a wholesome patriotism based upon the fundamentals of Americanism as established in the founding of the republic."

Dr. Evans declined to discuss what part, if any, the new organization would play in politics in the future.

dier of the American revolution, intended to commemorate the heroes of that war, was unveiled here today.

was found many years after the revolution. The body, in full uniform of a colonial soldier who apparently was killed in action was re-interred. It was never identified.

Mrs. Mary G. Powell, widow of a confederate officer and who discovered the history of the unknown grave, unveiled the tablet.

"The Gay Defender" Best Picture of Dix Career!

Richard Dix believes that his new picture which reaches the Lyceum tomorrow is his best to date.

It has "the Indian sign" on it.
To Dix, the "Indian sign" is significant of success instead of the "jinx"

AUTOMATIC MAN SURVIVES DRESS REHEARSAL TODAY

New York, Feb. 22.—(UP)—The automatic man survived a dress rehearsal of his first public appearance yesterday.

Without a blunder, the ideal servant, invented by R. J. Wensley of the Westinghouse Electric Co., went through his paces, answering the telephone, unveiling a portrait of George Washington, starting a vacuum cleaner and turning it off again.

Inside the mechanical man is just a lot of intricate machinery comprising all the good features of radio, electric stoves and alarm clocks. But on the outside he looks something like the rest of us. His eyes are backed with electric bulbs and his iron kelly is an iron kelly in fact.

Seated on one side of the room, Wensley dialed a number on the phone. The automatic man responded by slowly lifting with his mechanical arm the receiver of the telephone.

Wensley yodeled a few notes from a small flute, and with the right hand the automaton lifted a draped flag from a picture of George Washington.

Another note was sounded and he started an electric fan. A series of chirps from the Gute caused the automation to shut the fan off.

Three blasts on the whistle and a vacuum cleaner was switched on, then at a signal from Wensley, off.

"I conceived the idea of this apparatus about a year ago," said Wensley, "and since that time I have been working steadily in the laboratories at East Pittsburgh to perfect it."

A delicate mechanism within the mechanical man responds to vibrations, such as those made by a flute, and a change in the pitch of the notes causes various motions.

It has "the Indian sign" on it. To Dix, the "Indian sign" is significant of success instead of the "jinx" the term conveys to athletes.

For twelve years Dix has worn a $6.50 silver ring. He refuses to tell its history, but it has been on the little finger of his left hand in at least part of every picture he has ever made.

AUTOMATIC MAN SURVIVES DRESS REHEARSAL TODAY

New York, Feb. 22.—(U.P.)—The automatic man survived a dress rehearsal of his first public appearance yesterday.

Without a blunder, the ideal servant, invented by R. J. Wensley of the Westinghouse Electric Co., went through his paces, answering the telephone, unveiling a portrait of George Washington, starting a vacuum cleaner and turning it off again.

Inside the mechanical man is just a lot of intricate machinery comprising all the good features of radio, electric stoves and alarm

AS HIS CONTEMPORARIES REGARDED WASHINGTON

THE DISPATCH was shown today a priceless possession of L. F. Hough, an issue of the Ulster County Gazette, Volume 11, Number 88, published at Kingston, Ulster county, New York, by Samuel Freer and Son, and dated Saturday, January 4, 1800.

The newspaper is a four column sheet, four pages in size, and printed on tough paper. It is yellowed by age and slight tears are developing where it was folded. The Gazette carries "news" of congress almost a month old. Its foreign "news" covers letters dated in early October of the previous year.

Evidently after the first page had been laboriously set up and printed, the death of Washington was reported and that event was given prominence by putting a mourning border on all articles published on the second and third pages.

On page 2, under the conventional heading of Congress, House of Representatives, Thursday, December 29, it is announced that:

Mr. Marshall with deep sorrow on countenance, and in a low, pathetic tone of voice, rose and addressed the house as follows:

"The melancholy event which was yesterday announced without doubt, has been rendered but too certain. Our Washington is no more! The hero, the sage, and the patriot of America—the man on whom in times of danger, every eye was turned and all hopes were placed, lives now only in his own great actions, and in the hearts of an afflicted people.

If, sir, it had not been usual, openly to testify respect for the memory of those whom heaven has selected as its instruments for dispensing good to man, yet such has been the uncommon worth, and such the extraordinary incidents which have marked the life of him whose loss we all deplore, that the whole American nation impelled by the same feelings, would call with one voice for a public manifestation of that sorrow which is so deep and universal.

More than any other individual and as much as to one individual was possible, has he contributed to found this our wide spreading empire, and to give to the western world its independence and its freedom. Having effected the great object for which he was placed at the head of our armies, we have seen him convert the sword into the plough share and voluntarily sink the soldier in the citizen.

When the debility of our federal system had become manifest and the bond which connected the parts of this vast continent were dissolving, we have seen him the chief of those patriots who formed for us a constitution, which, by preserving the union, I trust, substantiate and perpetuate those blessings our revolution had promised to bestow.

In obedience to the general voice of his country, calling on him to preside over a great people, we have seen him once more quit the retirement he loved, and in a season more stormy and tempestuous than war itself with calm and wise determination pursue the true interests of the nation and contribute, more than any other could contribute to the establishment of that system of policy which will, I trust, yet preserve our peace, our honor, and our independence.

Having been twice unanimously chosen the Chief Magistrate of a free people, we see him at a time when his reelection with the universal suffrage could not have been doubted affording the world a rare instance of moderation by withdrawing from his high station to the peaceful walks of private life.

However public confidence may change and the public affections fluctuate with respect to others, yet with respect to him they have, in war and in peace, in public and in private life, been as steady as his exalted virtues.

Let us then, Mr. Speaker, pay the last tribute of respect and affection to our departed friend. Let the grand council of the nation display those sentiments which the nation feels."

Appropriate resolutions were then adopted. The Senate addressed this communication to the President of the United States:

"The Senate of the United States respectfully take leave, sir, to express to you their deep regret for the loss their country has sustained in the death of General George Washington. This event, so distressing to all our fellow citizens, must be peculiarly heavy to you who have long been associated with him in deeds of patriotism. Permit us, sir, to mingle our tears with yours; on this occasion it is manly to weep. To lose such a man at such a crisis, is no common calamity to the world: our country mourns her father. The Almighty disposer of human events has taken from us our greatest benefactor. It becomes us to submit with reverence to him who "maketh darkness this pavilion."

With patriotic pride we review the life of our Washington, and compare him with those of other countries who have been pre-eminent in fame. Ancient and modern fames are diminished before him. Greatness and guilt have too often been allied, but his fame is whiter than it is brilliant. The destroyers of nations stood abashed at the majesty of his virtue. It reproved the temperance of their ambition, and darkened the splendor of victory. The scenes closed, and we are no longer anxious lest misfortune should sully his glory; he has traveled on to the end of his journey, and carried with him an increasing weight of honor; he has deposited it safely, where misfortune cannot tarnish it—where malice cannot blast it. Favored of heaven, he departed without exhibiting the weakness of humanity; magnanimous in death, the darkness of the grave could not obscure his brightness.

Such was the man whom we deplore—Thanks to God, his glory is consummated. Washington yet lives upon earth in his spotless example—his spirit is in heaven.

Let his countrymen consecrate the memory of their heroic general, the patriotic statesman, and the virtuous sage; let them teach their children never to forget that the fruits of his labors, and his example are their inheritance."

President Adams made a fitting reply. We print excerpts: "The life of our Washington cannot suffer by comparison with those of other countries who have been most celebrated and exalted by fame. His example is complete, and it will teach wisdom and virtue to magistrates, citizens and men, not only in the present age, but in future generations, as long as our history shall be read. If a Trajan found a Pliny, a Marcus Aurelius can never want biographers, eulogists or historians."

Another section of the newspaper gives an account of the funeral, when the body was consigned to the tomb with solemn honors and funeral pomp.

On the ornament at the head of the coffin was inscribed Surge ad Judicium, at the middle of the coffin another inscription and on the silver plate, General George Washington, Departed this Life on the 14th of December, 1799, at 68.

THE WORLD'S GREAT EVENTS

ALBERT PAYSON TERHUNE

Queen Elizabeth

"HOW tall is your queen?" The red-haired old woman who asked this question of the Scottish envoy was herself a queen—one of the greatest in history. She was Elizabeth, daughter of Henry VIII of England. The sovereign about whom she was making inquiry was her kinswoman, the beautiful Mary Queen of Scots. The Scottish envoy answered cautiously:

"She is a little taller than your majesty."

"Then," declared Elizabeth, "she is a little too tall for perfect beauty."

This anecdote illustrates one of the countless phases of Elizabeth's amazing character. Vain of the beauty she did not possess, modest regarding the genius she did possess, unjust and capricious as a woman, just and wise as a queen, firm, yet often irresolute, strong yet sometimes pitifully weak, honest and open in policy, yet crafty and hypocritical in exceptional cases, a believer in the people's rights, yet personally a cruel tyrant; highly educated, yet with the shrewish vocabulary of a fishwoman—these are but a few of the countless inconsistencies and paradoxes in this most remarkable of rulers.

Henry VIII (son of the Henry who overcame and superseded Richard III) had ruled England in a somewhat selfish, eccentric fashion, yet, on the whole, wisely, raising the country from a third-rate power to the level of Europe's foremost nations. He had six wives, a fact less remarkable in those days when men married "early and often."

Henry left three children—a son, who, as Edward VI, succeeded him, and two daughters, Mary and Elizabeth. Edward died after a very brief reign, bequeathing the crown to his cousin, Lady Jane Gray. Mary's adherents executed Lady Jane and Mary came to the throne. She was married to Philip II of Spain, and so successfully introduced Spanish cruelty and inquisitorial methods into England as to earn the nickname "Bloody Mary." Incidentally she threw Elizabeth into prison for alleged conspiracy and on suspicion of heresy. After five years of miserable misrule Mary died childless, and in 1558 Elizabeth inherited the crown at the age of twenty-five. She ruled forty-five years.

Her first step was to rid the country of all Spanish influence and to reform religious and governmental affairs. In the matter of religion she erred as cruelly on the side of Protestantism as had Mary and the Spaniards in behalf of Catholics.

Elizabeth surrounded herself with the wisest ministers and counselors, and was guided by them in all matters save one. The one exception was the subject of marriage. A score of suitors, from Philip II to the son of Henry II of France, sought her hand. She coquetted with each, and at last, when weary of the amusement, dismissed them in turn, announcing to parliament that she was resolved to live and die unwed. This high-souled resolution did not prevent her from having a long series of court favorites, on whom she lavished gifts and advancements, to the envy of her subjects and the scandal of Europe. Among these favorites were the earls of Leicester and Essex and Sir Walter Raleigh.

Mary, the young queen of Scotland, had been married to Francis II, son of Henry II of France. On Francis' death Mary had returned to Scotland, where her notoriously bad life and worse rule aroused the Scotch to such a pitch of resentment that Mary fled to Elizabeth for protection. Elizabeth promptly put her in prison, kept her there nineteen years and then had her beheaded. Philip II of Spain denounced Elizabeth as a murderess, and, under pretext of avenging Mary Queen of Scots, raised a mighty fleet known as the "Invincible Armada" and prepared to invade England. He was at that time also oppressing the Netherlands, with which nation Elizabeth had formed a religious alliance. She hinted that she would abandon her Dutch allies if Philip would give up the plan of invasion. He refused. The Armada set sail, but was destroyed by a storm.

Elizabeth was a patron of all the arts, and her reign was the Golden Age of English literature. Shakespeare, Spenser, Bacon and countless other writers flourished under her protection, winning favor by poetical rhapsodies of her beauty and charm. It was also the Golden Age of discovery and exploration. Raleigh and Drake and a dozen other adventurers won for this queen vast possessions.

In person Elizabeth was tall and lean with a hooked nose, thin lips, small black beady eyes and teeth blackened by tobacco and decay. Her chief cause of hatred against Mary Queen of Scots apparently rose from the fact that Mary was young and beautiful and wicked, while she herself was only old, ugly and wicked. The chief ostensible pretext, however, was that Mary was a Catholic and, as next kin to Elizabeth, might make England once more a Catholic nation.

Yet, when dying, Elizabeth named Mary's son (King James VI of Scotland) as her successor, and on her death, in 1603, he ruled England under the title of James I.

Elizabeth was the first constitution of a monarch of England.

DOMESTIC BULL MOST DANGEROUS

A big game hunter on returning from Africa said that the most dangerous animal in the world was not the lion or the tiger, but the farmer's domestic bull. An Eastern farm journal for many months has been editorially mentioning fatal experiences of farmers with bulls and in nearly every issue the name of some farmer is recorded who has lost his life through placing too much trust in the herd sire.

There are few neighborhoods in which one or more farmers have not been killed by bulls in the last 20 years, and many bearing scars of attacks which through some miracle did not result in death, says a writer in the Michigan Farmer. It is the gentle bull which usually becomes enraged and attacks its owner. A farmer who works around a docile bull for many months may become careless and forget the tremendous power of that animal which with the powerful head and shoulders can easily crush a man in spite of every effort to fight back.

A few months ago we visited a prominent Holstein breeder who entered the box stall of his herd bull with the animal on a stout metal staff. The bull charged the owner but by placing the staff in the corner of the stall he was able to keep the animal braced away until help arrived. It proved the value of keeping the bull on a staff when led.

At the Michigan state college and on farms where bulls have metal and concrete staffs and exercise yards there are few fatalities. But herd bulls in pastures and ordinary barnyards are a constant menace. This is true also when feeding them and cleaning their stalls. Every moment one's attention is taken from the animal there is danger of being knocked down and trampled. Farming is a hazardous business if carelessness prevails in looking after the bull.

Silage Without Tramping Is Favored by Wisconsin

Make silos higher and do away with tramping the silage—maybe that's what we will be doing in a few years.

A few years ago a silo at the University of Wisconsin farm was filled without tramping, and the silage kept in such good shape that since then all have been filled in that way. One or more sections of distributor pipe are used and a man at the top distributes the silage.

The silage settles more if not tramped, but more silage can be run in as soon as it settles—a common practice even where tramping is practiced.

In view of these facts, why not build the silo a little higher and save the extra labor of tramping?

Besides, engineering experts say it takes less power to fill a high silo than a low one, strange as that may seem.

Along with this goes the fact that a great many silage cutters are being run too fast. By reducing the speed somewhat, a larger pulley can be put on and smaller engines or tractors used to run the cutters. Lower speed makes the machinery last longer.

Fly wheel cutters less than 11 inches in diameter are not economical. Better results come from a medium-sized machine at comparatively slower speed.

New York College Gives Plans for Ventilation

Carefully conducted studies made by the New York State College of Agriculture during two months of each of the past five winters show that the walls and ceilings of dairy stables, as well as the roofs of dairy barns can be kept dry by proper ventilation. It has been found, also, that ventilation can be accomplished with less material, less labor, and at less cost than was formerly supposed, according to A. M. Goodman at the New York State College of Agriculture at Ithaca, N. Y.

Most dairy barns need only one good chimney or out-take flue; few of them need more than two. The construction of the chimney is the greatest expense of the whole installation. The part of these chimneys that goes from the floor of the mow to the eaves of the barn must be built while the mows are empty. The upper part of the chimneys and, in fact, all the rest of the system may be put in when the loft is full, he says.

By building the upper part of the out-take flue when the mows are full, no high climbing is necessary and practically no scaffolding is needed, but it should be remembered that part of the out-take flues must be built before hay is put in the mows or while the mows are empty.

Barn Space for Cow

The cubic space allowance per cow is not the most important thing in a barn. Proper ventilation is of much more importance than the number of cubic feet of air allowed per cow. However, 600 to 800 cubic feet of air space should be provided for each cow, and in addition an efficient ventilating system must be provided. The recommended cross-sectional area of outlet flues is 36 square inches per cow, and a somewhat greater total area is required in the intake flues.

FROM NUMBERS, B. C., TO THE U. S. CENSUS

First Counting of Noses Was Done by Moses.

Washington.—All Turkey stayed at home one Friday recently while 50,000 officials took the first census of the Ottoman empire.

"Turkey has made up for tardiness by asking questions far more thorough than appear in the famous first census of history," says a bulletin from the Washington headquarters of the National Geographic society.

"Take ye the sum of all the congregation of the children of Israel, after their families, by the house of their fathers, with the number of their names every male by their polls; from twenty years old and upward, all that are able to go forth to war in Israel."

Thus spoke the Lord to Moses, and Moses, with Aaron's assistance, collected the figures for the first census report, which may be found in practically every home and hotel room. It is appropriately entitled "Numbers," the fourth book of the Bible.

"By its breadth of scope the census William of Normandy ordered for his new kingdom of England, resembles modern surveys. He commanded his minions in 1085 A. D. to record every lord and peasant, every acre, every ox, every mill, every manor, every weir and every plow, the value thereof and this is forward looking—the natural resources, woods, fields and streams capable of development and revenue. The report to William the Conqueror became the Domesday Book, unreadable today except by scholars, yet protected in the public record office at London as one of the most precious possessions of England.

Russia's First Count in 1897.

"The United States, although a newcomer in the ranks of civilization, was one of the first nations to establish the modern periodic census. Sweden took the lead before our first census in 1790, but England, France and Prussia did not see the necessity of regular counting of noses until ten or twenty years later. Russia took no census until 1897.

"Deeply religious settlers of America nearly upset our first census when they harked back to another less fortunate Bible census. 'Satan stood up against Israel,' our ancestors pointed out to the marshals, 'and provoked David to number Israel from Beersheba even to Dan.' What happened? 'God was displeased; therefore he smote Israel. The Lord sent pestilence upon Israel; and there fell of Israel 70,000 men.'

"Fears that our first census would bring similar destruction upon the nation did not materialize, so the marshals delivered their reports to President Washington within nine months for all the original states, except Vermont, Rhode Island and South Carolina. Vermont and Rhode Island entered the Union later. The marshal of South Carolina found workers scarce at $1 per 150 heads counted.

"Today a visitor at the census bureau may see the names of famous Americans and the answers given to the first census takers' simple questionnaires. John Hancock's family consisted of two 'free white males of sixteen and upward,' three white females, seven other persons (servants no doubt) and no slaves. Progress in 70 years presents a contrast with data for Abraham Lincoln collected in 1860: 'Age, fifty-one, married, lawyer, value of real estate $5,000—personal estate $12,000, Kentucky, place of birth.'

"From one census every ten years the census bureau has increased to 104 censuses, in addition to many special surveys such as that made to supply data to congress for immigration quotas. One census collected every week shows the number of babies born. Using these figures the bureau sets up its large calculator at an exhibit and every 20 seconds announces to the world that the millions of Americans has been increased, for example, by baby No. 118,972,331.

Statistics About Buying.

"Not content with counting men, women and children, where they work, whether they are in school and if so, how long; not satisfied with tabulating the value of wheat grown and tons of manganese ore dug out of the ground; not resting even with summing up the business of hats and hammocks, shoes and sulphuric acid manufactured in the United States, the census bureau proposes to 'complete the picture.' To finish the portrait in figures of the whole United States, it is necessary, they say, to have a census of distribution. That means an accounting of what is sold to the housewife over the grocery, drug and meat counters, and of what the wholesaler sells to the retailer.

"Recently the census bureau released its first experimental distribution survey for which Baltimore served as a laboratory specimen. The weavers of figures found that in Baltimore 283 people are required to support one neighborhood grocery; that Baltimoreans spend $456.72 per year in stores; that the department stores take the most; that Baltimore spends more on automobiles than on furnishing its homes and that in the average family purchasing budget food requires 31 per cent, clothing 20 per cent and the family automobile comes next with 9 per cent. The same survey has been extended to ten other cities; Chicago, Atlanta, Denver, Fargo, N. D.; Kansas City, Providence, San Francisco, Seattle, Springfield, Ill., and Syracuse, N. Y. Some day it will be extended to the whole nation."

Our Customers Write the Best Ads for ISO-VIS!

Ever since it was put on the market last winter, letters have come pouring in by the thousands from enthusiastic customers praising Iso-Vis.

Because they relate how Iso-Vis has worked in their cars—because they give frank, unsolicited opinions, we believe they are the best "ads" that could be written about this extraordinary motor oil.

They tell in the everyday language of actual use what we mean by such terms as "constant viscosity". They are actual records of the unusual service Iso-Vis gives. We quote at random:

From a letter written by Mr. W. P. Renner, of Sikeston, Missouri—"I have used your Iso-Vis for several months. I ran the first five quarts twelve hundred miles, and the second five about 2,250 miles, without adding any in my Chevrolet. The pressure gauge never weakened, was always good."

"I am now driving twice as far as I did on other oils before draining the crankcase and when I do drain it I notice the body is still good, says Mr. W. A. Branscome of the Geo. H. Lee Co., 1115-1117 Harney St., Omaha, Nebraska.

From the proprietor of the Balsam Lake Service Station, Balsam Lake, Wis.—"Mr. John Boeris—"I know I will not be able to sell as much oil to a customer as I did before, but more customers will make up for it."

From a letter written by Mr. Floyd Goodrich, Treasurer of the Waterloo Concrete Corporation, of Waterloo, Iowa—"As a result of our test on the two cars, we some six weeks later adopted Iso-Vis for our entire fleet of cars and trucks. Our experience leads us to believe that it is the best oil which we have ever used for automobile and truck service."

"I can truthfully say that Iso-Vis is the cheapest and best lubrication money can buy," quoted from the letter of Mr. A. D. Thomas, of Eldorado, Illinois.

There is another advantage in quoting letters. They say more than modesty would permit us to say about our own product! We suggest that you give Iso-Vis a trial and judge it by the only real standard—its performance in your car! 30c per quart.

"She is a little taller than your majesty."

"Then," declared Elizabeth, "she is a little too tall for perfect beauty." This anecdote illustrates one of the countless phases of Elizabeth's amazing character. Vain of the beauty she did not possess, modest regarding the genius she did possess, unjust and capricious as a woman, just and wise as a queen, firm, yet often irresolute, strong yet sometimes pitifully weak, honest and open in policy, yet crafty and hypocritical in exceptional cases, a believer in the people's rights, yet personally a cruel tyrant; highly educated, yet with the shrewish vocabulary of a fishwoman—these are but a few of the countless inconsistencies and paradoxes in this most remarkable of rulers.

Henry VIII (son of the Henry who overcame and superseded Richard III) had ruled England in a somewhat selfish, eccentric fashion, yet, on the whole, wisely, raising the country from a third-rate power to the level of Europe's foremost nations. He had six wives, a fact less remarkable in those days when men married "early and often."

Henry left three children—a son, who, as Edward VI, succeeded him, and two daughters, Mary and Elizabeth. Edward died after a very brief reign, bequeathing the crown to his cousin, Lady Jane Gray. Mary's adherents executed Lady Jane and Mary came to the throne. She was married to Philip II of Spain, and so successfully introduced Spanish cruelty and inquisitorial methods into England as to earn the nickname "Bloody Mary." Incidentally she threw Elizabeth into prison for alleged conspiracy and on suspicion of heresy. After five years of miserable misrule Mary died childless, and in 1558 Elizabeth inherited the crown at the age of twenty-five. She ruled forty-five years.

Her first step was to rid the country of all Spanish influence and to reform religious and governmental affairs. In the matter of religion she erred as cruelly on the side of Protestantism as had Mary and the Spaniards in behalf of Catholicism.

Elizabeth surrounded herself with the wisest ministers and counselors, and was guided by them in all matters save one. The one exception was the subject of marriage. A score of suitors, from Philip II to the son of Henry II of France, sought her hand. She coquetted with each, and at last, when weary of the amusement, dismissed them in turn, announcing to parliament that she was resolved to live and die unwed. This high-souled resolution did not prevent her from having a long series of court favorites, on whom she lavished gifts and advancements, to the envy of her subjects and the scandal of Europe. Among these favorites were the earls of Leicester and Essex and Sir Walter Raleigh.

Mary, the young queen of Scotland, had been married to Francis II, son of Henry II of France. On Francis' death Mary had returned to Scotland, where her notoriously bad life and worse rule aroused the Scotch to such a pitch of resentment that Mary fled to Elizabeth for protection. Elizabeth promptly put her in prison, kept her there nineteen years and then had her beheaded. Philip II of Spain denounced Elizabeth as a murderess, and, under pretext of avenging Mary Queen of Scots, raised a mighty fleet known as the "Invincible Armada" and prepared to invade England. He was at that time also oppressing the Netherlands, with which nation Elizabeth had formed a religious alliance. She hinted that she would abandon her Dutch allies if Philip would give up the plan of invasion. He refused. The Armada set sail, but was destroyed by a storm.

Elizabeth was a patron of all the arts, and her reign was the Golden Age of English literature. Shakespeare, Spenser, Bacon and countless other writers flourished under her protection, winning favor by poetical rhapsodies of her beauty and charm. It was also the Golden Age of discovery and exploration. Raleigh and Drake and a dozen other adventurers won for this queen vast possessions.

In person Elizabeth was tall and lean with a hooked nose, thin lips, small black beady eyes and teeth blackened by tobacco and decay. Her chief cause of hatred against Mary Queen of Scots apparently rose from the fact that Mary was young and beautiful and wicked, while she herself was only old, ugly and wicked. The chief ostensible pretext, however, was that Mary was a Catholic and, as next kin to Elizabeth, might make England once more a Catholic nation.

Yet, when dying, Elizabeth named Mary's son (King James VI of Scotland) as her successor, and on her death, in 1603, he ruled England under the title of James I.

Elizabeth was the first constitutional monarch of England.

DAIRY THE DAIRY

DOMESTIC BULL MOST DANGEROUS

A big game hunter on returning from Africa said that the most dangerous animal in the world was not the lion or the tiger, but the farmer's domestic bull. An Eastern farm journal for many months has been editorially mentioning fatal experiences of farmers with bulls and in nearly every issue the name of some farmer is recorded who has lost his life through placing too much trust in the herd sire.

There are few neighborhoods in which one or more farmers have not been killed by bulls in the last 20 years, and many bearing scars of attacks which through some miracle did not result in death, says a writer in the Michigan Farmer. It is the gentle bull which usually becomes enraged and attacks its owner. A farmer who works around a docile bull for many months may become careless and forget the tremendous power of that animal which with the powerful head and shoulders can easily crush a man in spite of every effort to fight back.

A few months ago we visited a prominent Holstein breeder who entered the box stall of his herd bull with the animal on a stout metal staff. The bull charged the owner but by placing the staff in the corner of the stall he was able to keep the animal braced away until help arrived. It proved the value of keeping the bull on a staff when led.

At the Michigan state college and on farms where bulls have metal and concrete staffs and exercise yards there are few fatalities. But herd bulls in pastures and ordinary barnyards are a constant menace. This is true also when feeding them and cleaning their stalls. Every moment one's attention is taken from the animal there is danger of being knocked down and trampled. Farming is a hazardous business if carelessness prevails in looking after the bull.

Silage Without Tramping Is Favored by Wisconsin

Make silos higher and do away with tramping the silage—maybe that's what we will be doing in a few years.

A few years ago a silo at the University of Wisconsin farm was filled without tramping, and the silage kept in such good shape that since then all have been filled in that way. One or more sections of distributor pipe are used and a man at the top distributes the silage.

The silage settles more if not tramped, but more silage can be run in as soon as it settles—a common practice even where tramping is practiced.

In view of these facts, why not build the silo a little higher and save the extra labor of tramping? Besides, engineering experts say it takes less power to fill a high silo than a low one, strange as that may seem.

Along with this goes the fact that a great many silage cutters are being run too fast. By reducing the speed somewhat, a larger pulley can be put on and smaller engines or tractors used to run the cutters. Lower speed makes the machinery last longer.

Fly wheel cutters less than 11 inches in diameter are not economical. Better results come from a medium-sized machine at comparatively slower speed.

New York College Gives Plans for Ventilation

Carefully conducted studies made by the New York State College of Agriculture during two months of each of the past five winters show that the walls and ceilings of dairy stables, as well as the roofs of dairy barns can be kept dry by proper ventilation. It has been found, also, that ventilation can be accomplished with less material, less labor, and at less cost than was formerly supposed, according to A. M. Goodman at the New York State College of Agriculture at Ithaca, N. Y.

Most dairy barns need only one good chimney or out-take flue; few of them need more than two. The construction of the chimney is the greatest expense of the whole installation. The part of these chimneys that goes from the floor of the mow to the eaves of the barn must be built while the mows are empty. The upper part of the chimneys and, in fact, all the rest of the system may be put in when the loft is full, he says.

By building the upper part of the out-take flue when the mows are full, no high climbing is necessary and, practically no scaffolding is needed, but it should be remembered that part of the out-take flues must be built before hay is put in the mows or while the mows are empty.

Barn Space for Cow

The cubic space allowance per cow is not the most important thing in a barn. Proper ventilation is of much more importance than the number of cubic feet of air allowed per cow. However, 600 to 800 cubic feet of air space should be provided for each cow, and in addition an efficient ventilating system must be provided. The recommended cross-sectional area of outlet flues is 36 square inches per cow, and a somewhat greater total area is required in the intake flues.

FROM NUMBERS, B. C., TO THE U. S. CENSUS

First Counting of Noses Was Done by Moses.

Washington.—All Turkey stayed at home one Friday recently while 50,000 officials took the first census of the Ottoman empire.

"Turkey has made up for tardiness by asking questions far more thorough than appear in the famous first census of history," says a bulletin from the Washington headquarters of the National Geographic society.

"Take ye the sum of all the congregation of the children of Israel, after their families, by the house of their fathers, with the number of their names every male by their polls; from twenty years old and upward, all that are able to go forth to war in Israel."

"Thus spoke the Lord to Moses, and Moses, with Aaron's assistance, collected the figures for the first census report, which may be found in practically every home and hotel room. It is appropriately entitled 'Numbers,' the fourth book of the Bible.

"By its breadth of scope the census William of Normandy ordered for his new kingdom of England, resembles modern surveys. He commanded his minions in 1085 A. D. to record every lord and peasant, every acre, every ox, every mill, every manor, every weir and every plow, the value thereof and—this is forward looking—the natural resources, woods, fields and streams capable of development and revenue. The report to William the Conqueror became the Domesday Book, unreadable today except by scholars, yet protected in the public record office at London as one of the most precious possessions of England.

Russia's First Count in 1897.

"The United States, although a newcomer in the ranks of civilization, was one of the first nations to establish the modern periodic census. Sweden took the lead before our first census in 1790, but England, France and Prussia did not see the necessity of regular counting of noses until ten or twenty years later. Russia took no census until 1897.

"Deeply religious settlers of America nearly upset our first census when they harked back to another less fortunate Bible census. 'Satan stood up against Israel,' our ancestors pointed out to the marshals, 'and provoked David to number Israel from Beersheba even to Dan.' What happened? 'God was displeased; therefore he smote Israel. The Lord sent pestilence upon Israel; and there fell of Israel 70,000 men.'

"Fears that our first census would bring similar destruction upon the nation did not materialize, so the marshals delivered their reports to President Washington within nine months for all the original states, except Vermont, Rhode Island and South Carolina. Vermont and Rhode Island entered the Union later. The marshal of South Carolina found workers scarce at $1 per 150 heads counted.

"Today a visitor at the census bureau may see the names of famous Americans and the answers given to the first census takers' simple questionnaires. John Hancock's family consisted of two 'free white males of sixteen and upward,' three white females, seven other persons (servants no doubt) and no slaves. Progress in 70 years presents a contrast with data for Abraham Lincoln collected in 1860: 'Age, fifty-one, married, lawyer, value of real estate $5,000—personal estate $12,000, Kentucky, place of birth.'

"From one census every ten years the census bureau has increased to 101 censuses, in addition to many special surveys such as that made to supply data to congress for immigration quotas. One census collected every week shows the number of babies born. Using these figures the bureau sets up its large calculator at an exhibit and every 20 seconds announces to the world that the millions of Americans has been increased, for example, by baby No. 118,972,331.

Statistics About Buying.

"Not content with counting men, women and children, where they work, whether they are in school and if so, how long; not satisfied with tabulating the value of wheat grown and tons of manganese ore dug out of the ground; not resting even with summing up the business of hats and hammocks, shoes and sulphuric acid manufactured in the United States, the census bureau proposes to 'complete the picture.' To finish the portrait in figures of the whole United States, it is necessary, they say, to have a census of distribution. That means an accounting of what is sold to the housewife over the grocery, drug and meat counters, and of what the wholesaler sells to the retailer.

"Recently the census bureau released its first experimental distribution survey for which Baltimore served as a laboratory specimen. The weavers of figures found that in Baltimore 283 people are required to support one neighborhood grocery; that Baltimoreans spend $456.72 per year in stores; that the department stores take the most; that Baltimore spends more on automobiles than on furnishing its homes and that in the average family purchasing budget food requires 31 per cent, clothing 20 per cent and the family automobile comes next with 9 per cent. The same survey has been extended to ten other cities: Chicago, Atlanta, Denver, Fargo, N. D.; Kansas City, Providence, San Francisco, Seattle, Springfield, Ill., and Syracuse, N. Y. Some day it will be extended to the whole nation."

Our Customers Write the Best Ads for ISO-VIS!

Ever since it was put on the market last winter, letters have come pouring in by the thousands from enthusiastic customers praising Iso-Vis.

Because they relate how Iso-Vis has worked in their cars—because they give frank, unsolicited opinions, we believe they are the best "ads" that could be written about this extraordinary motor oil.

They tell in the everyday language of actual use what we mean by such terms as "constant viscosity". They are actual records of the unusual service Iso-Vis gives. We quote at random:

From a letter written by Mr. W. P. Renner, of Sikeston, Missouri—"I have used your Iso-Vis for several months. I ran the first five quarts twelve hundred miles, and the second five about 2,250 miles, without adding any in my Chevrolet. The pressure gauge never weakened, was always good."

"I am now driving twice as far as I did on other oils before draining the crankcase and when I do drain it I notice the body is still good, says Mr. W. A. Branscome of the Geo. H. Lee Co., 1115-1117 Harney St., Omaha, Nebraska.

From the proprietor of the Balsam Lake Service Station, Balsam Lake, Wis.—Mr. John Beeris—"I know I will not be able to sell as much oil to a customer as I did before, but more customers will make up for it."

From a letter written by Mr. Floyd Goodrich, Treasurer of the Waterloo Concrete Corporation, of Waterloo, Iowa—"As a result of our test on the two cars, we some six weeks later adopted Iso-Vis for our entire fleet of cars and trucks. Our experience leads us to believe that it is the best oil which we have ever used for automobile and truck service."

"I can truthfully say that Iso-Vis is the cheapest and best lubrication money can buy," quoted from the letter of Mr. A. D. Thomas, of Eldorado, Illinois.

There is another advantage in quoting letters. They say more than modesty would permit us to say about our own product! We suggest that you give Iso-Vis a trial and judge it by the only real standard—its performance in your car! 30c per quart. Iso-Vis "F" for Fords.

RAY CONGER WINS RACE, OUTRUNNING A FIELD OF 14 MEN

GAINS PRESIDENT TROPHY IN MEADOW BROOK TOURNEY

RUNNER TAKES AN EARLY LEAD IN THE 660-YARD RUN

BREASTS THE TAPE AHEAD OF SOBER, MAKES IT IN 1 MINUTE, 23 SECONDS

Philadelphia, Feb. 22.—(UP)—Outrunning a field of 14 competitors, running in two heats, Ray Conger, Illinois A. C. star and recent conqueror of Lloyd Hahn and Dr. Otto Peltzer, won the president's trophy in the feature of the annual Meadow Brook games last night.

Taking an early lead in the 660-yard run, Conger breasted the tape ahead of Pinkie Sober, of the Holy Name club, and was officially clocked at 1 minute and 23 seconds.

Eddie Swinburne, New York A. C., won the second heat in 1:25 and was given third place in the final.

Al Miller, Boston A. A., and former Harvard football and track star, won the 50-yard invitation sprint in 5 3-5 seconds. Folwell Scull, of Pennsylvania, was second and A. Bates of Penn State, was third.

Penn State defeated Pennsylvania University in a special two-mile relay in 8:11 2-5.

The one-mile intercollegiate championship relay was won by Syracuse University in 3:27 3-4. Fordham was second and Colgate third.

New York, Feb. 22.—Lloyd Hahn and Ray Conger will meet again after all.

Jack Ryder, Boston A. A. coach, has persuaded Hahn to give up his determination not to compete against Conger again, and the pair will meet in the special mile run in the K. of C. games in Madison Square Garden on February 29.

Just to make the K. of C. mile "the race of the century," Dr. Peltzer, the German champion, will answer the starter's gun with Hahn and Conger.

After losing to Conger in a 1000-yards race in Kansas City Saturday night, Hahn vehemently charged that Conger deliberately fouled him twice and said he would never again run in a race with the Illinois A. C. star.

"Hahn will pay no attention to the competition," Ryder said, "but will attempt to set a new world's record for the mile."

Dr. Peltzer, competing in his final race in this country, has a score to settle with Conger himself. It was the former Iowa State star who gave the German champion his first defeat in this country in a 1,000-meter race at Chicago.

HAROLD CUTBILL, "FLYING PARSON," RACES TONIGHT

LINES UP FOR 800 METER RACE IN MASONIC INDOOR TRACK MEET

WILL SEEK TO REGAIN HIS FORM IN THE NEW YORK RACE

New York, Feb. 22.—(UP)—Harold Cutbill, "the flying parson," will make his first start since March, 1922, when he lines up for the 800-meter race in the annual Masonic indoor track meet tonight.

Recently reinstated by the A. A. U., Cutbill will attempt to regain his form of six years ago when he was one of the outstanding middle distance runners in the country. He has been in training under Jack Ryder, Boston A. A. coach, and in practice has flashed some of his old time speed which defeated Joie Ray and others.

Roland Locke, the former Nebraska sprinter who is now running for the New York A. C., will make his second eastern start in the sprint series at 75, 90, 100 and 110 yards. Locke was defeated in the New York A. C. games Monday night.

Pincus Sober, Holy Name club, national junior half mile record holder, and Eddie Swinburne, New York A. C., are Cutbill's two outstanding opponents in the 800-meters.

B. H. S. PLAY TWO EXHIBITION TILTS BEFORE TOURNEY

MEET LITTLE FALLS THERE TONIGHT; SECOND STRINGERS TO MEET ATTACK

PLAY C-I FRIDAY; CONCENTRATE ON AVOIDING INJURIES BEFORE TOURNAMENT

In an effort to spare the tournament team from any possible accidents the Brainerd high school first team will be used very little in the game with Little Falls tonight at Little Falls.

The second stringers are scheduled to do the heavy work while the first team men will be put in for a short drill.

With the tournament not more than a week away Coach Kasch feels that he cannot afford to take any chances in injuring any of his first string men. Furthermore Brainerd meets Little Falls in the first game of the conference and it would be unwise to show their hand to the opposition before the tourney.

The Brainerd high school will also meet Crosby-Ironton in an exhibition game Friday at the C-I gymnasium. The locals will play straight basketball at that time eliminating any of the tournament plays that have been perfected.

Harry Rice Is Better Player Than Thought

Harry Rice, recently acquired by the Detroit Tigers from St. Louis for Heinie Manush and Lu Blue, is a better ball player than he ever looked to be in a St. Louis uniform.

Rice is one of the fastest outfielders in either league, a wonderful judge of a fly ball and he has the best throwing arm in baseball. He will hit better than 300 for Detroit, says a writer in the Detroit News.

Season before last Rice was one of the best batsmen in the league and a leading fielder.

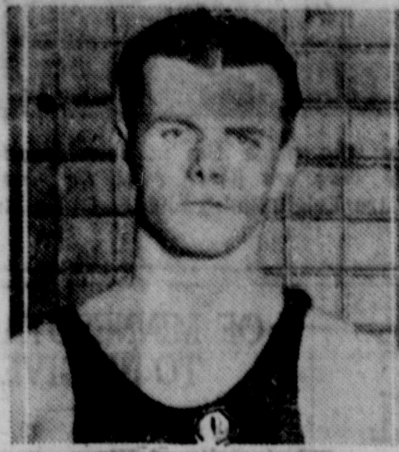

Before the start of the 1927 season he had a quarrel with the owner of the team. Bad feeling resulted and the breach was never healed.

The inside story of the Rice deal is that Rice was drawing several thousand dollars less in salary than two or three other outfielders carried by the St. Louis team and Rice knew, of course, that he was worth more salary than any other man on the pay roll. Rice balked and kept on balking. St. Louis had to let him go.

Thorpe Pushes Gopher Swimmers Into High for Season

Niels Thorpe, Minnesota's youthful but veteran swimming coach, has a big initial bid and a chance to redouble in the big hand of star tank performers that has been dealt him for this year. Thorpe is making no championship claims, though his teams seldom fall lower than second place in the conference scramble. He will meet some stiff competition from such teams as Michigan and Northwestern, but he thinks the Gophers will do well enough. Minnesota has already ducked Wisconsin by a large score.

The picture shows Coach Thorpe, (2) center top, surrounded by some of his best men as follows: (1) Hugo Matson, Virginia, Minn., the Minnesota diver; (3) Max Moody, veteran competitor in dashes and relay events for Minnesota; (4) Frank Lucke, a crack performer in the 44 yard free-style event; (5) Captain Sam Hill, Minneapolis; March 3, Iowa at Iowa City; March 9, Northwestern at Minneapolis; March 23 and 24, Western Conference meet at Minneapolis.

Thorpe is working his men hard to make the best possible showing when the Western Conference Championship meet takes place March 23 and 24th in the Minneapolis Athletic Club tank. The rest of the season's schedule is as follows: February 22, Michigan at Minneapolis; March 3, Iowa at Iowa City; March 9, Northwestern at Minneapolis; March 23 and 24, Western Conference meet at Minneapolis.

ST. GODDARD HAS ADVANTAGE IN QUEBEC DERBY

THIRD AND FINAL DAY OF DOG RACE ON AT QUEBEC TODAY

LEADER IS CLOSELY PRESSED BY LEONARD SEPPALA, WINNER OF SECOND LAP

Quebec, Que., Feb. 22.—(UP)—Emil St. Goddard of Manitoba drove his team to a sensational finish in the third and last lap today, winning the Quebec dog derby by a margin of two minutes and 43 seconds. Leonard Seppala of Alaska came in second.

Quebec, Que., Feb. 22.—(UP)—Emil St. Goddard today maintained a slight advantage in the annual Quebec dog derby as the third and final day of the racing opened.

However St. Goddard was closely pressed by Leonard Seppala, winner of the second lap, who brought his Alaskan huskies in at such a rate yesterday that he moved within 40 seconds of St. Goddard. St. Goddard had a ten minutes' headway after the first day's racing.

Yesterday Seppala finished first, E. Brydges second and St. Goddard third.

The official standing as the third day opened:

St. Goddard—7:35.10.
Seppala—7:35.50.
E. Brydges—7:44.55.
S. Russick—8:35.15.
H. Chevrete—8:35.55.
F. Du Puis—8:36.20.

Seppala's race Tuesday was a masterful affair and as he finished the first 21 miles he was well ahead of the field, having made the distance in two hours flat; at the 30 mile post he was six minutes ahead of the field.

The race was run on a bitterly cold day, the temperature dropping to 15 degrees below zero. There was a strong wind playing across the 40-mile course.

The tournament is open to any checker player in the state, it is said.

LOMSKI AND SEKYRA MATCHED, 10 ROUND BOUT

New York, Feb. 22.—(UP)—Leo Lomski, Aberdeen (Wash.) boxer, and Joe Sekyra, Dayton, O., have been matched for a ten-round bout in Madison Square Garden on March 30 and the winner will get a title bout with the champion, Tommy Loughran, probably in Yankee stadium in June.

Loughran returned yesterday from a month's Caribbean cruise and reiterated his policy of fighting any opponent selected for him. But modified the time limit.

RAY CONGER WINS RACE, OUTRUNNING A FIELD OF 14 MEN

GAINS PRESIDENT TROPHY IN MEADOW BROOK TOURNEY

RUNNER TAKES AN EARLY LEAD IN THE 660-YARD RUN

BREASTS THE TAPE AHEAD OF SOBER, MAKES IT IN 1 MINUTE, 23 SECONDS

Philadelphia, Feb. 22.—(UP)—Outrunning a field of 14 competitors, running in two heats, Ray Conger, Illinois A. C. star and recent conqueror of Lloyd Hahn and Dr. Otto Peltzer, won the president's trophy in the feature of the annual Meadow Brook games last night.

Taking an early lead in the 660-yard run, Conger breastst the tape ahead of Pinkie Sober, of the Holy Name club, and was officially clocked at 1 minute and 23 seconds.

Eddie Swinburne, New York A. C., won the second heat in 1:25 and was given third place in the final.

Al Miller, Boston A. A., and former Harvard football and track star, won the 50-yard invitation sprint in 5 3-5 seconds. Folwell Scull, of Pennsylvania, was second and A. Bates of Penn State, was third.

Penn State defeated Pennsylvania University in a special two-mile relay in 8:11 2-5.

The one-mile intercollegiate championship relay was won by Syracuse University in 3:27 3-4. Fordham was second and Colgate third.

New York, Feb. 22.—Lloyd Hahn and Ray Conger will meet again after all.

Jack Ryder, Boston A. A. coach, has persuaded Hahn to give up his determination not to compete against Conger again, and the pair will meet in the special mile run in the K. of C. games in Madison Square Garden on February 29.

Just to make the K. of C. mile "the race of the century," Dr. Peltzer, the German champion, will answer the starter's gun with Hahn and Conger.

After losing to Conger in a 1,000-yard race in Kansas City Saturday night, Hahn vehemently charged that Conger deliberately fouled him twice and said he would never again run in a race with the Illinois A. C. star.

"Hahn will pay no attention to the competition," Ryder said, "but will attempt to set a new world's record for the mile."

Dr. Peltzer, competing in his final race in this country, has a score to settle with Conger himself. It was the former Iowa State star who gave the German champion his first defeat in this country in a 1,000-meter race at Chicago.

HAROLD CUTBILL, "FLYING PARSON," RACES TONIGHT

LINES UP FOR 800 METER RACE IN MASONIC INDOOR TRACK MEET

WILL SEEK TO REGAIN HIS FORM IN THE NEW YORK RACE

New York, Feb. 22.—(UP)—Harold Cutbill, "the flying parson," will make his first start since March, 1922, when he lines up for the 800-meter race in the annual Masonic indoor track meet tonight.

Recently reinstated by the A. A. U., Cutbill will attempt to regain his form of six years ago when he was one of the outstanding middle distance runners in the country. He has been in training under Jack Ryder, Boston A. A. coach, and in practice has flashed some of his old time speed which defeated Joie Ray and others.

Roland Locke, the former Nebraska sprinter who is now running for the New York A. C., will make his second eastern start in the sprint series at 75, 90, 100 and 110 yards. Locke was defeated in the New York A. C. games Monday night.

Pincus Sober, Holy Name club, national junior half mile record holder, and Eddie Swinburne, New York A. C., are Cutbill's two outstanding opponents in the 800-meters.

B. H. S. PLAY TWO EXHIBITION TILTS BEFORE TOURNEY

MEET LITTLE FALLS THERE TONIGHT: SECOND STRINGERS TO MEET ATTACK

PLAY C-I. FRIDAY; CONCENTRATE ON AVOIDING INJURIES BEFORE TOURNAMENT

In an effort to spare the tournament team from any possible accidents the Brainerd high school first team will be used very little in the same with Little Falls tonight at Little Falls.

The second stringers are scheduled to do the heavy work while the first team men will be put in for a short drill.

With the tournament not more than a week away Coach Kasch feels that he cannot afford to take any chances in injuring any of his first string men. Furthermore Brainerd meets Little Falls in the first game of the conference and it would be unwise to show their hand to the opposition before the tourney.

The Brainerd high school will also meet Crosby-Ironton in an exhibition game Friday at the C-I gymnasium. The locals will play straight basketball at that time eliminating any of the tournament plays that have been perfected.

Harry Rice Is Better Player Than Thought

Harry Rice, recently acquired by the Detroit Tigers from St. Louis for Heinie Manush and Lu Blue, is a better ball player than he ever looked to be in a St. Louis uniform.

Rice is one of the fastest outfielders in either league, a wonderful judge of a fly ball and he has the best throwing arm in baseball. He will hit better than 300 for Detroit, says a writer in the Detroit News.

Season before last Rice was one of the best batsmen in the league and a leading fielder.

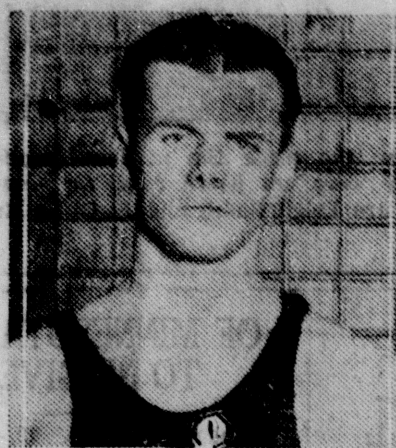

Before the start of the 1927 season he had a quarrel with the owner of the team. Bad feeling resulted and the breach was never healed.

The inside story of the Rice deal is that Rice was drawing several thousand dollars less in salary than two or three other outfielders carried by the St. Louis team and Rice knew, of course, that he was worth more salary than any other man on the pay roll. Rice balked and kept on balking. St. Louis had to let him go.

Thorpe is working his men hard to make the best possible showing when the Western Conference Championship meet takes place March 23 and 24th in the Minneapolis Athletic Club tank. ST. GODDARD HAS ADVANTAGE IN QUEBEC DERBY

THIRD AND FINAL DAY OF DOG RACE ON AT QUEBEC TODAY

LEADER IS CLOSELY PRESSED BY LEONARD SEPPALA, WINNER OF SECOND LAP

Quebec, Que., Feb. 22.—Emil St. Goddard of Manitoba drove his team to a sensational finish in the third and last lap today, winning the Quebec dog derby by a margin of two minutes and 43 seconds. Leonard Seppala of Alaska came in second.

Quebec, Que., Feb. 22.—(UP)—Emil St. Goddard today maintained a slight advantage in the annual Quebec dog derby as the third and final day of the racing opened.

However St. Goddard was closely pressed by Leonard Seppala, winner of the second lap, who brought his Alaskan huskies in at such a rate yesterday that he moved within 40 seconds of St. Goddard. St. Goddard had a ten minutes' headway after the first day's racing.

Yesterday Seppala finished first, E. Brydges second and St. Goddard third.

The official standing as the third day opened:

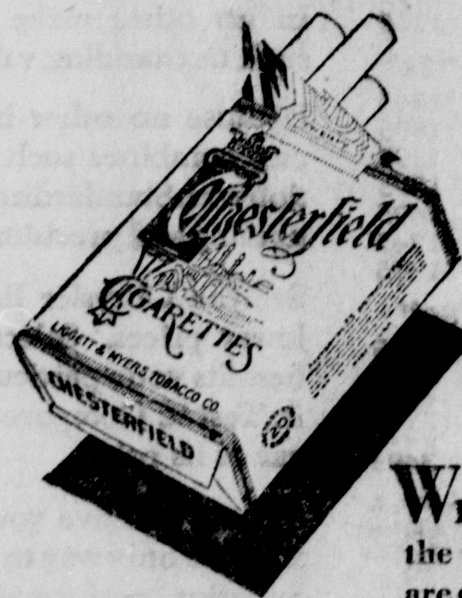

St. Goddard	7:35.10.
Seppala	7:35.50.
E. Brydges	7:44.55.
S. Russick	8:35.15.
H. Chevrete	8:35.55.
F. Du Puis	8:36.20.

Seppala's race Tuesday was a masterful affair and as he finished the first 21 miles he was well ahead of the field, having made the distance in two hours flat; at the 30 mile post he was six minutes ahead of the field.

The race was run on a bitterly cold day, the temperature dropping to 15 degrees below zero. There was a strong wind playing across the 40-mile course.

AVIATOR WITH FOUR PASSENGERS SET OUT IN RYAN CABIN MONOPLANE

PERSISTENT RUMOR THAT HE PLANS 600-MILE FLIGHT EASTWARD

St. Louis, Mo., Feb. 22.—(UP)—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh left at 10:12 A. M. in a cabin monoplane accompanied by four passengers. Although he headed west on taking off, there was a persistent rumor at the field that he planned an eastward trip of about 500 miles.

Belief that Lindbergh planned no short Washington birthday jaunt was based on the fact that he took gas enough for a six hundred mile flight.

He was accompanied by Major William B. Robertson, former president of the Robertson Aircraft Corporation; Harold M. Bixby, president of the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce; Harry H. Knight, Lindbergh's host and president of the Flying Club, and B. F. Mahoney, manufacturer of the "Spirit of St. Louis."

A Time Waster, But Can Act If Interested.

He who saves time saves all. If your friends are habitual wasters of time, and you cannot reform them, forgive and forget. The outstanding keys in writing as read by the graphologist follow: Look for large writing with words spread well apart. A wide margin at the left and sometimes at the right is usually found.

If small letters t and d point high and the t bar is light and weak looking, the writer is a "day-dreamer" and will naturally waste time.

When small o's and a's are open and hooks are found on t bar and terminals the writer is able to talk and yet "say nothing." This is the style of the diplomat.

Numerous fancy scrolls and unnecessary lines indicate a writer who cares little for time and its value.

When writing is of a pronounced slant and letters in words are far apart we will also know that we have a procrastinator in the writer. Another key to this faulty characteristic is the pronounced misproportion of the latter part of the letter m.

WOMAN FOUND CREMATED ALIVE IN GASOLINE POOL

Morristown, N. J., Feb. 22.—(UP)—The murder by fire of Miss Margaret Brown, who was found being cremated alive in a pool of gasoline near here, led police today on the trail of a man who may have robbed her of $9,000. He is believed to have burned her to conceal the robbery.

Miss Brown was identified today by her brother, F. J. Brown, of Fort Lee, with whom she lived.

Investigators believed Miss Brown was drugged, probably chloroformed, after she had been persuaded to accompany her slayer in his automobile. No marks of violence were found on the body. Motorists who found her ablaze in the outskirts of Morristown noted that she had lain without moving in the burning gasoline and it was reasoned that she must have been drugged.

Her internal organs have been sent to a chemist for poison analysis.

Mrs. Ruth Toms, widow of the slain druggist, testified she saw Hickman fire the shot which killed her husband.

WOMAN FOUND CREMATED ALIVE IN GASOLINE POOL

Morristown, N. J., Feb. 22.—(UP)—The murder by fire of Miss Margaret Brown, who was found being cremated alive in a pool of gasoline near here, led police today on the trail of a man who may have robbed her of $9,000. He is believed to have burned her to conceal the robbery.

Miss Brown was identified today by her brother, F. J. Brown, of Fort Lee, with whom she lived.

Investigators believed Miss Brown was drugged, probably chloroformed, after she had been persuaded to accompany her slayer in his automobile. No marks of violence were found on the body. Motorists who found her ablaze in the outskirts of Morristown noted that she had lain without moving in the burning gasoline and it was reasoned that she must have been drugged.

Her internal organs have been sent to a chemist for poison analysis.

LUNDBORG CASE IS ORDERED DISMISSED

Judge J. H. Warner Holds That Burning of Dam Was Not Arson

SUBMITS DECISION

Dam in Question is That Located at Outlet of Cullen Lake

Theodore and Joseph Lundborg, operators of a nursery farm near Cullen Lake, were freed of the charge of arson in the third degree in connection with the burning of the dam located at the outlet of Cullen Lake on December 31 by Judge J. H. Warner when he submitted his decision in the case yesterday afternoon in municipal court.

Judge Warner in dismissing the case held that the dam in question was not a structure defined by Section 10, 311, Sub 2, statutes of Minnesota, defining arson in the third degree and that the offense of arson in the third degree had not been connected.

The following was submitted by Judge J. H. Warner today:

The case of the State of Minnesota against Joseph Lundborg and Theodore Lundborg, in the municipal court, ended yesterday in the defendants being discharged.

The defendants were charged with committing the crime of arson in the third degree, by wilfully burning the dam at the foot of Upper Cullen Lake.

Upon the preliminary examination of defendants on February 14, motion to dismiss was made at the close of the state's case upon the ground that the burning of the dam in question was not arson. The motion was at the time overruled and all the testimony taken, and the examination adjourned to February 21, when the court heard further arguments of counsel in the matter, and decided in favor of the defendants.

Arson is defined by the statute, and in order to constitute arson by the burning of a structure or erection it must be such a structure as capable of affording shelter for human beings.

The dam in question was not such a structure. There was no claim that it was burned for insurance, or that it was insured, and it was not a car, vessel or other vehicle.

INCREASE IN WORK OF ASSESSORS SEEN

Radical Changes Announced by Minnesota Tax Commission

FORMULATE NEW SYSTEM

Card Index System Presents New Problem in Cost to Brainerd

Radical changes in the method of making assessments, constituting additional collection of information relative to real estate and property thus boosting the cost of making the assessment, were announced by the Minnesota Tax Commission, in a letter received by Charles W. Mahlum, county auditor.

The commission has formulated a new system in connection with making the assessment which involves the use of a card index system in making the appraisal of real estate improvements.

Two forms are to be used, one for platting and the other for unplatted property.

The information that the assessors are requested to compile provides that they give the size of the lot, its value, the type of building whether a dwelling house, apartment, hotel, garage, etc., when built, number of rooms, form of construction whether frame, brick, stucco, whether it has a full, half, or no basement at all, kind of roof, kind of heating system etc. The card also requires such information as improvement specifications, the size of all buildings, even to the number of cubic feet contents.

How this mandate will effect the city of Brainerd is hard to say at this time as Assessor M. E. Hitch estimates that the information asked will involve a year's work for one man in the city alone. The city charter limits the amount to make the assessment at $75 per 1,000 population or a total of $750 for the city.

Mr. Mahlum stated today that he intended to lay the city's case before the Minnesota Tax Commission for further information as to how the city can be handled and still remain within the limitation provided by the charter.

The cards can be used over a period of years by noting further improvements or deducting in case of fires, razing or removal of buildings.

Card Index System Presents New Problem in Cost to Brainerd

Radical changes in the method of making assessments, constituting additional collection of information relative to real estate and property thus boosting the cost of making the assessment, were announced by the Minnesota Tax Commission, in a letter received by Charles W. Mahlum, county auditor.

The commission has formulated a new system in connection with making the assessment which involves the use of a card index system in making the appraisal of real estate improvements.

Two forms are to be used, one for platting and the other for unplatted property.

The information that the assessors are requested to compile provides that they give the size of the lot, its value, the type of building whether a dwelling house, apartment, hotel, garage, etc., when built, number of rooms, form of construction whether frame, brick, stucco, whether it has a full, half, or no basement at all, kind of roof, kind of heating system etc. The card also requires such information as improvement specifications, the size of all buildings, even to the number of cubic feet contents.

How this mandate will effect the city of Brainerd is hard to say at this time as Assessor M. E. Hitch estimates that the information asked will involve a year's work for one man in the city alone. The city charter limits the amount to make the assessment at $75 per 1,000 population or a total of $750 for the city.

Mr. Mahlum stated today that he intended to lay the city's case before the Minnesota Tax Commission for further information as to how the city can be handled and still remain within the limitation provided by the charter.

The cards can be used over a period of years by noting further improvements or deducting in case of fires, razing or removal of buildings.

THOUGHTS TURN TO WASHINGTON

City Observes Birth of Notable General—President in Programs, Functions

Schools Closed; Churches Further Observe Day as Opening of Lenten Season

Brainerd people and the rest of the nation turned their thoughts today to George Washington who was born on this date 196 years ago.

The Masonic lodge will observe the day with fitting ceremonies this afternoon and evening.

Special programs are in line this evening at association meetings. Stores remained open today but the schools, many of the city and county offices, postoffice, and banks observed the day as a legal holiday.

The day was also the first of the Lenten season, several city churches holding morning services.

Dolores Costello in "OLD SAN FRANCISCO" is a Warner Bros. picture of this novel.

SYNOPSIS

The Vasquez ranch is coveted by Buckwell, San Francisco boss. Vasquez won't sell. Buckwell and lawyer, Brandon, plan to void Vasquez land grant. Brandon's nephew, Terry, loves Dolores, Vasquez's beautiful granddaughter, and warns of plot. Vasquez spurns warning and informs Terry that Dolores must marry young Spaniard, Terry, heartbroken, goes on spree. Dolores finds Terry in Frisco's Barbary Coast and is disillusioned. Buckwell meets Dolores and, intrigued, lures her to Frisco. Terry rescues Dolores and beats Buckwell. Terry is forgiven and discloses Buckwell's real purpose. Buckwell tries to evict Vasquez by force, but his men are routed by the fiery Spaniard.

Sword in hand, the fine old gentleman stalked away, mumbling to himself, "I shall guard my land and my property as I did when the Gold Rush came—I shall kill if need be. No one but a Vasquez shall own these lands!"

The two young people watched while he took his place before the ruined entrance. He leaned against the broken masonry with his sword at rest and watched with eagle eyes to see that no one passed by the mission on the road that led from town. He was a pathetic figure, holding on, through courage and pride, to all that he held dear in life.

"Poor Granddaddy," Dolores tried to choke down a sob, "we must not disturb him, but I will stay and watch until you return from town."

"All right, sweetheart," nodded Terry in assent. "I will try and return before dark with an injunction, even though it be a temporary one."

Their eyes met, and closed to hold the love that each saw reflected in the other's face. As though drawn by some irresistible force Terry advanced until he was close to Dolores, so close that their hands clasped at their sides and their lips met in a quick kiss that was so terrifying in its sweetness that Terry hurried away.

Long after he was out of sight Dolores stood alone, watching and dreaming. Her thoughts were swept away from sordid reality by the sheer ecstasy of his caress. She wanted him back and began counting the seconds until his return.

And a few feet away stood another sentinel, sword in hand, counting the moments until Buckwell or one of his satellites arrived to carry out the nefarious scheme. Vasquez was prepared to give up his life in defense of his beloved property.

CHAPTER XII

Dolores is Left Alone

The hour of California's magnificent sunset had come and still Vasquez and Dolores stood guard.

With night approaching, bringing the advent of another day that much nearer, their thoughts were concerned with what was in store for them. No place to go, no friends to consult, no money to draw from! It was a cruel outlook for a chivalrous old nobleman who had grown up with the ancestral acres and enjoyed life in a carefree, indolent manner that harmed no one except himself. His present dilemma was the result of having relinquished business and farming activities to sit back and enjoy life with utter disregard for all responsibilities. Yet, regardless of what Senor Vasquez had or had not done, the land belonged to him, and the expression on his face brooded ill for anyone who dared trespass.

Dolores sat on the mossy ground beneath a great tree with knees cradled in her arms, looking at the hacienda. The brilliant reflection from the setting sun turned all its windows to gold, and the soft breeze that was fast dying down stirred the ivy covered walls and made the place seem alive. Her eyes could find no fault with the picturesque old structure. The instinct for a home was deeply planted in Dolores' young breast. She could not bear the thought of going away from the surroundings that had always been so dear. She wanted to live there with Terry and have him become master of the weed filled fields and neglected vineyards as well as of her heart and ancestral home.

The lone servant ambled about the deserted dining room and shook his head as he cleared away the untouched repast. The sound of someone walking through the patio drew him quickly to the open doorway.

"May I be of service, señor?" he asked with deference upon seeing a man crossing to the open yard beyond.

The man was Buckwell. Startled by a voice from the dark interior, he whirled about, and it took him several seconds to discern the dim shape in the doorway.

"Where's your master?" he snarled upon making sure it was the lone servant of the place.

"Outside, señor," came hastily from the cowering peon.

"Where—outside? Now, don't lie to me or I'll break your neck."

"By the mission—the chapel, señor—the chapel!" and two snarling hands came up protectively before his face.

With a grunt of satisfaction Buckwell hitched his cane in the crook of his arm and picked his way gingerly across the roughly tiled patio to the path beyond. Having visited the chapel on his first call at the rancho, he knew where to go.

As soon as he came within range of Vasquez's vision the elderly sentinel straightened up from his weary vigil and firmly clutched his sword with half numbed fingers. His knuckles were white from strain.

"You—you have dared return," trembled Vasquez savagely. "You who have betrayed my hospitality and sought to defile my home! Begone—before it is too late!" He stood with outstretched arm and eyes blazing with fury.

At the sound of angry voices Dolores stopped her twilight dreaming and watched intently from behind the tree.

"Cut out the romance," remarked Buckwell impatiently to Vasquez, "and listen to reason. I've got a warrant to take you into court for interfering with my survivors."

Vasquez drew in a quick breath of shocked surprise.

Noting that his threat had caused the desired alarm, Buckwell continued, "Oh, yes, I know all about it, and the company will sue you for smashing their instrument." He smirked in satisfaction over the other's discomfiture. "You have got to vacate this place by noon tomorrow—understand?" He shook his fist emphatically before Vasquez's face.

Buckwell's words and intolerable rudeness electrified Vasquez, and, inflamed by an increasing anger, he said bitterly, "You seek to dishonor my name." Madly bearing down upon Buckwell, he continued with upraised sword, "But a Vasquez avenges a Vasquez!"

"Are you crazy?" cried Buckwell in alarm, and, frightened by this exhibition of ferocity, he hastily stepped back.

Quivering with rage, Vasquez followed Buckwell's retreat step by step. Extending his sword, he lunged viciously at his betrayer's heart. But the exertion was too great. His waning strength ebbed from his arm and the sword sagged before it touched its intended victim. Tottering uncertainly for a moment, Vasquez plunged forward to the ground.

The promise made hours before was kept. Hernandez Vasquez had defended property and name with his very life!

Buckwell looked down at the prostrate form, his lips still twisted in a sneer. There was no doubt in his mind about the "old man" being dead. It simplified matters considerably to have him out of the way. The young granddaughter was difficult to deal with, but Buckwell knew from experience how to handle such matters. He knew of a hundred ways whereby young girls could be disposed of and no one ever learn their fate. With a shrug of indifference he straightened up from his contemplation of Vasquez's body and was amazed at being confronted by the silent, accusing presence of Dolores.

Her great eyes peered at him as though he were a loathsome monster. He had just committed an irreparable injury, and she was powerless to strike back. With a cry of anguish she dropped to her knees and bent over the inert form. "Granddaddy!" she called softly. There was no answer. "Granddaddy!" With loving careful hands she turned his face from the ground. The lifeless eyes stared blankly. "Oh, dear God!" she sobbed and for a moment pressed her fingers against her own eyes to blot out the sight and realization of what had happened.

3 MOTOR CARS READY FOR SPEED TESTS

HOPE TO GAIN 210 MILES AN HOUR AT DAYTONA BEACH, FLORIDA

ARE MOST POWERFUL EVER BUILT, 2 OF THEM GREAT IN SIZE

Daytona Beach, Fla., Feb. 22.—(UP)—Three of the most powerful motor cars ever built—two of them great in size—today were in readiness for speed tests by which it was hoped that a speed of 210 miles an hour might be exceeded.

The first car that will streak over the hard-packed sands of the Ormond-Daytona course today will be the Napier "Bluebird" in which Captain Malcolm Campbell of England set a one mile record Sunday at an average speed of almost 207 miles an hour.

Then will follow the big triplex of J. M. White of Philadelphia, a cumbersome appearing machine with no wind resistance but enormous power.

Frank Lockhart in his diminutive Stutz Blackhawk will be the third to whirl out onto the course. Lockhart was unable to compete yesterday owing to clutch trouble.

The A. A. A. sanction of the races ends Thursday night and in order to establish a new record the three drivers must complete their runs either today or tomorrow.

White's motor car did not meet the requirements of the A. A. A. because there was no reverse gear. One was installed yesterday, however, and White felt certain that his machine would develop a speed of 225 miles an hour or more.

The three motor cars present a study in contrasts. Lockhart, who is only 24 years old, has a beautiful small, stream-lined car. It has been described by Sig Haugdahl as the best "stream-lined car for actual speed that I ever saw."

The car is equipped with two 8-cylinder cubic-inch motors mounted on one crank case with separate crankshafts. The motors will deliver 400 horsepower at 7,000 revolutions.

Campbell's car is more than twice the size of Lockhart's but is perfectly stream-lined, based on tunnel tests. A Napier aero motor—similar to the ones used by British flyers in the recent Schneider cup races—provide the power. The engine has 12 cylinders built in three sets of four cylinders each. One set is vertical and the others are V shape as in the Cadillac motor car.

The machine is rated at 450 horsepower but actually develops between 900 and 950 horsepower at 3,000 revolutions. Campbell is 43 years old.

White entry is an abandonment of all the principles of speed machines, save that of power. There is no attempt at stream-lining for wind resistance and in comparison with the other two machines appears almost crude. But in fact it is an enormous power plant on wheels and it is by power alone that White hopes to break the British record.

The machine has three 12 high powered compression Liberty motors of 5 inch bore and seven inch stroke. The engine is tuned to 3,300 revolutions per minute when idling. It is expected to develop 1,500 horsepower at 2,000 revolutions under full load.

Sage Tea Dandy to Darken Hair

By DOROTHY LANG

You can turn gray, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost overnight if you'll get a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" at any drug store. It costs only 75 cents. Millions of bottles of this old famous Sage Tea Recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, are sold annually, says a well-known druggist, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can tell it has been applied. Those whose hair is turning gray or becoming faded have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the gray hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful. This is the age of youth. Gray-haired, unattractive folks aren't wanted around, so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound to-night and you'll be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days.

Vasquez spurns warning and informs Terry that Dolores must marry young Spaniard, Terry, heartbroken, goes on spree. Dolores finds Terry in Frisco's Barbary Coast and is disillusioned. Buckwell meets Dolores and, intrigued, lures her to Frisco. Terry rescues Dolores and beats Buckwell. Terry is forgiven and discloses Buckwell's real purpose. Buckwell tries to elude Vasquez by force, but his men are routed by the fiery Spaniard.

Sword in hand, the fine old gentleman stalked away, mumbling to himself, "I shall guard my land and my property as I did when the Gold Rush came—I shall kill it if need be. No one but a Vasquez shall own these lands!"

The two young people watched while he took his place before the ruined entrance. He leaned against the broken masonry with his sword at rest and watched with eagle eyes to see that no one passed by the mission on the road that led from town. He was a pathetic figure, holding on, through courage and pride, to all that he held dear in life.

"Poor Granddaddy," Dolores tried to choke down a sob. "We must not disturb him, but I will stay and watch until you return from town."

"All right, sweetheart," nodded Terry in assent. "I will try and return before dark with an injunction, even though it be a temporary one."

Their eyes met, and closed to hold the love that each saw reflected in the other's face. As though drawn by some irresistible force Terry advanced until he was close to Dolores, so close that their hands clasped at their sides and their lips met in a quick kiss that was so terrifying in its sweetness that Terry hurried away.

Long after he was out of sight Dolores stood alone, watching and dreaming. Her thoughts were swept away from sordid reality by the sheer ecstasy of his caress. She wanted him back and began counting the seconds until his return.

And a few feet away stood another sentinel, sword in hand, counting the moments until Buckwell or one of his satellites arrived to carry out the nefarious scheme.

Vasquez was prepared to give up his life in defense of his beloved property.

Dolores Is Left Alone

The hour of California's magnificent sunset had come and still Vasquez and Dolores stood guard.

With night approaching, bringing the advent of another day that much nearer, their thoughts were concerned with what was in store for them. No place to go, no friends to consult, no money to draw from! It was a cruel outlook for a chivalrous old nobleman who had grown up with the ancestral acres and enjoyed life in a carefree, indolent manner that harmed no one except himself. His present dilemma was the result of having relinquished business and farming activities to sit back and enjoy life with utter disregard for all responsibilities. Yet, regardless of what Senor Vasquez had and had not done, the land belonged to him, and the expression on his face brooked ill for anyone who dared trespass.

Dolores sat on the mossy ground beneath a great tree with knees cradled in her arms, looking at the hacienda. The brilliant reflection from the setting sun turned all its windows to gold, and the soft breeze that was fast dying down stirred the ivy covered walls and made the place seem alive. Her eyes could find no fault with the picturesque old structure. The instinct for a home was deeply planted in Dolores' young breast. She could not bear the thought of going away from the surroundings that had always been so dear. She wanted to live there with Terry and have him become master of the weed filled fields and neglected vineyards as well as of her heart and ancestral home.

The lone servant ambled about the deserted dining room and shook his head as he cleared away the untouched repast. The sound of someone walking through the patio drew him quickly to the open doorway.

"May I be of service, señor?" he asked with deference upon seeing a man crossing to the open yard beyond.

The man was Buckwell. Started by a voice from the dark interior, he whirled about, and it took him several seconds to discern the dim shape in the doorway.

"Where's your master?" he snarled upon making sure it was the lone servant of the place.

"Outside, señor," came hastily from the cringing peon.

"Where—outside? Now, don't lie to me or I'll break your neck."

"By the mission—the chapel, señor—the chapel!" and two gnarled hands came up protectingly before his face.

With a grunt of satisfaction Buckwell hit the crook of his arm and picked his way gingerly across the roughly tiled patio to the path beyond. Having visited the chapel on his first call at the rancho, he knew where to go.

As soon as he came within range of Vasquez's vision the elderly sentinel straightened up from his weary vigil and firmly clutched his sword with half numbed fingers. His knuckles were white from strain.

"You—you have dared return," trembled Vasquez savagely. "You who have betrayed my hospitality and sought to defile my home! Begone—before it is too late!" He stood with outstretched arm and eyes blazing with fury.

At the sound of angry voices Dolores stopped her twilight dreaming and watched intently from behind the tree.

"Cut out the romance," remarked Buckwell impatiently to Vasquez, "and listen to reason. I've got a warrant to take you into court for interfering with my surveyors."

Vasquez drew in a quick breath of shocked surprise.

Noting that his threat had caused the desired alarm, Buckwell continued, "Oh, yes, I know all about it, and the company will sue you for smashing their instrument."

He smirked in satisfaction over the other's discomfiture. "You have got to vacate this place by noon tomorrow—understand?" He shook his fist emphatically before Vasquez's face.

"Are you crazy?" cried Buckwell in alarm, and, frightened by this exhibition of ferocity, he hastily stepped back.

Quivering with rage, Vasquez followed Buckwell's retreat step by step. Extending his sword, he lunged viciously at his betrayer's heart. But the exertion was too great. His waning strength ebbed from his arm and the sword sagged before it touched its intended victim. Tottling uncertainly for a moment, Vasquez plunged forward to the doorway.

The promise made hours before was kept. Hernandez Vasquez had defended property and name with his very life!

Buckwell looked down at the prostrate form, his lips still twisted in a sneer. There was no doubt in his mind about the "old man" being dead. It simplified matters considerably to have him out of the way. The young granddaughter was difficult to deal with, but Buckwell knew from experience how to handle such matters. For a new of a hundred ways whereby young girls could be disposed of and no one ever learn their fate. With a shrug of indifference he straightened up from his contemplation of Vasquez's body and was amazed at being confronted by the silent, accusing presence of Dolores.

Her great eyes peered at him as though he were a loathsome monster. He had just committed an irreparable injury, and she was powerless to strike back. With a cry of anguish she dropped to her knees and bent over the inert form. "Granddaddy!" she called softly.

There was no answer. "Granddaddy!" With loving careful hands she turned his face from the ground. The lifeless eyes stared blankly. "Oh, dear God!" she sobbed and for a moment pressed hot fingers against her own eyes to blot out the sight and realization of what had happened.

3 MOTOR CARS READY FOR SPEED TESTS

HOPE TO GAIN 210 MILES AN HOUR AT DAYTONA BEACH, FLORIDA

ARE MOST POWERFUL EVER BUILT. 2 OF THEM GREAT IN SIZE

Daytona Beach, Fla., Feb. 22.—(UP)—Three of the most powerful motor cars ever built—two of them great in size—today were in readiness for speed tests by which it was hoped that a speed of 210 miles an hour might be exceeded.

The first car that will streak out over the hard-packed sands of the Ormond-Daytona course today will be the Napier "Bluebird" in which Captain Malcolm Campbell of England set a one mile record Sunday at an average speed of almost 207 miles an hour.

Then will follow the big triplex of J. M. White of Philadelphia, a cumbersome appearing machine with no wind resistance but enormous power.

Frank Lockhart in his diminutive Stutz Blackhawk will be the third to whirl out onto the course. Lockhart was unable to compete yesterday owing to clutch trouble.

The A. A. A. sanction of the races ends Thursday night and in order to establish a new record the three drivers must complete their runs either today or tomorrow.

White's motor car did not meet the requirements of the A. A. A. because there was no reverse gear. One was installed yesterday, however, and White felt certain that his machine would develop a speed of 225 miles an hour or more.

The three motor cars present a study in contrasts. Lockhart, who is only 24 years old, has a beautiful small, stream-lined car. It has been described by Sig Haugdahl as the best "stream-lined car for actual speed that I ever saw."

The car is equipped with two 8-cylinder cubic-inch motors mounted on one crank case with separate crank-shafts. The motors will deliver 400 horsepower at 7,000 revolutions.

Campbell's car is more than twice the size of Lockhart's but is perfectly stream-lined, based on tunnel tests. A Napier aero motor—similar to the ones used by British flyers in the recent Schneider cup races—provide the power. The engine has 12 cylinders built in three sets of four cylinders each. One set is vertical and the others are V shape as in the Cadillac motor car. The machine is rated at 450 horsepower but actually develops between 900 and 950 horsepower at 3,000 revolutions. Campbell is 43 years old.

White entry is an abandonment of all the principles of speed machines, save that of power. There is no attempt at stream-lining for wind resistance and in comparison with the other two machines appears almost crude. But in fact it is an enormous power plant on wheels and it is by power alone that White hopes to break the British record.

The machine has three 12 high powered compression Liberty motors of 5 inch bore and seven inch stroke. The engine is tuned to 3,300 revolutions per minute when idling. It is expected to develop 1,500 horsepower at 2,000 revolutions under full load.

Buckwell looked down at the prostrate form, his lips still twisted in a sneer. There was no doubt in his mind about the "old man" being dead. It simplified matters considerably to have him out of the way. The young granddaughter was difficult to deal with, but Buckwell knew from experience how to handle such matters. For a new of a hundred ways whereby young girls could be disposed of and no one ever learn their fate. With a shrug of indifference he straightened up from his contemplation of Vasquez's body and was amazed at being confronted by the silent, accusing presence of Dolores.

From Raising Foxes to Grand Opera

It's a long way from raising foxes to singing in grand opera, but young Arthur Farney, fox farmer of St. Mary's, Ontario, has scaled these heights. While in Canada last summer Edouard Albion, director of the Washington National opera, heard young Farney sing and was so impressed with his baritone voice that he engaged him for his company.
